Cloudy, fine weather. The maximum temperature yesterday was 85.1 and the minimum 58.6, the figures for the corresponding day last year being 78.6 and 57.7.

WORK TO START ON PEKING-SUIYUAN RAILWAY IN JUNE

Cabinet Approves Issuance Of $5,000,000 Bond Issue To Banks

READY BY FIRST OF YEAR

Loan For Double Tracking Mukden Line Has Been Signed

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, May 30.—Extension of the Peking-Suiyuan Railway to Paotou thus giving a freight outlet to one of the richest districts in all China, is to begin early in June, according to plans of the Government. The Cabinet has already approved the issuing of $5,000,000 in bonds to secure a construction loan from Chinese banks.

The loan will bear seven and a half percent interest and will run for five years, interest payments to begin after the first year. Remainder of the money necessary for extending the line is already in hand, it is said and it is expected that the rails will be laid by the end of September and that the line will be open for traffic at the close of the year. New cars and other rolling stock is to be provided so that the large amounts of products can be well handled from the beginning.

Persons who have recently been in the western district around Paotou and beyond have reported that unusual trade opportunities are offered there for all who wish to engage in it. At present the only outlet is by way of the Yellow River. With the new line in operation products can be taken to Paotou by means of the large rafts that are used in that country.

John Crane, son of Minister Charles R. Crane and several others are returning today from a tour of the Paotou trade district. The country is rich in varied products and it is said that as soon as rail facilities are available both Chinese and foreign capital will be naturally drawn there. Further extension of the line will be possible in a very few years more, it is believed.

U.S. Unconcerned About Anglo-Jap Pact, Says Paper

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 1.—A New York message states that in view of the determined efforts in certain senatorial quarters in Washington to arouse feeling against the renewal of the Anglo-Japanese Treaty, significance attaches to a leading article in the San Francisco Chronicle, which declares that Americans generally regard the Treaty as none of their business.

Melbourne, June 1.—In the House of Representatives, replying to a question, the Acting Prime Minister, Sir Joseph Cook, said that the Commonwealth Government as far as possible favored subscribing to the Hay Doctrine of Chinese integrity and independence.

Commons In Uproar Over Dumping Bill

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 1.—Angry scenes early this morning marked the close of a long debate in the House of Commons on the Government's antidumping measures.

Mr. Austen Chamberlain at midnight moved the closure on the financial resolutions, which were the preliminary to the introduction of the Safeguarding of Industries Bill, amid cries of Gag. The Opposition decided not to vote, but retained their seats during the division, shouting "Let the tame cats vote," and also Puss, Puss, as the Coalitionists entered the lobby, while some of the Labor members sang God save Ireland.

The announcement that the closure had been carried by 171 votes to 2 provoked a renewed pandemonium. The Speaker appealed to the Members to discontinue their unseemly behavior. After this the Bill was introduced and passed the first reading, amid renewed disorder.

NEW U.S. RADIO STATION TO HAVE LIMITED RADIUS

Plant At Peking Will Not Be Able To Send Beyond Philippines

(China Press Correspondence)

Peking, May 31.—There has been in the past some misunderstanding about the work that is being done upon the naval wireless station at the American Legation. It has been thought that the new masts that are being erected to take the place of the old wooden ones are of such a type as to make possible communication at almost any distance—at least between the United States and China. It is pointed out, however, that these new masts, although from the fact that they are built on a Rifle Tower plan, that is, not stayed, as are the towers of the new Mitsui station outside of Peking, they seem to be a great deal higher than the old masts, are actually only a hundred feet taller; that is, three hundred feet. With these masts it will be possible only to send messages as far as the Philippines, though, of course, it is possible to receive almost any message from any part of the globe if the instruments are properly tuned.

At present it has been possible to communicate with the Philippines through the old Russian station outside of Vladivostok that is in the hands of the Americans. But sooner or later it will be necessary to return this station to Russia, and when that time comes it is desirable to have still direct communication with the Islands. For this reason the extension of the sending range of the Naval Wireless has been made, because with the old aeriels it was necessary to relay the messages sent to the Philippines.

Formosa Council Act Promulgated

The appointees to the Council include some prominent Japanese and Formosan businessmen.

RELIEF IN SIGHT FOR HOSPITALS UNDER CAVE PLAN

Parliamentary Grant Of £1,000,000 Proposed By Committee

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 2.—The financial anxieties of hospitals, already experienced by several of the most important institutions, are likely to be somewhat diminished if the recommendations of the committee of investigation, presided over by Lord Cave, are adopted.

It is forecasted that the Committee will propose that Parliament grant £1,000,000 during the current year for distribution, as occasion demands, by a suggested central, semi-Government, body, designated the "Hospitals Commission."

Other recommendations, it is understood, will be deduction of income-tax in respect of employers' contributions to hospitals, and remission of death duties on legacies made to hospitals.

It is stated that the committee favors the retention of the voluntary principle, which the hospitals strongly desire, instead of public maintenance, which entails an enormous outlay.

It is mentioned that while the income of hospitals has increased 67 percent since before the war, expenditure has increased 150 percent. In this connection, the idea has been formulated that it may be possible to reduce expenditure by co-operative buying.

Navy Bill Passes American Senate

Washington, June 1.—The Senate has passed the Navy Appropriation Bill, amounting to $494,000,000. NO SIGNS YET OF CHANG TSO-LIN'S URGA EXPEDITION

Little Evidence Of 16,000 Troops In Kalgan, As Reported

RESTRICTIONS HIT TRADE

Interference Of Soldiers Puts Stop To Commercial Activity

BY JOSEF W. HALL

(China Press Correspondent)

Kalgan, May 31.—The city is quiet with the assurance that, in spite of the renewed talk of Chang Tso-lin's Urga expedition, nothing extraordinary is about to happen. There is no notable activity, military or otherwise, to be seen. If the sixteen thousand troops which Chang claims to have ready in Kalgan actually are quartered here, they must be an unbelievably retiring and quiet lot, for evidence of such a large military population is lacking upon the streets.

The Chinese troops are making a demonstrative show of holding the southern fringe of the Mongolian plateau south of Pengchang, which is about 200 miles north of Kalgan. Sixty miles of this is tame country well-settled by Chinese squatters and is in no more danger of Mongol attack than the Chihli plain, yet the military have put close restrictions on the two passes out of Kalgan, and brought trade practically to a standstill. Camel caravans have practically stopped. A few oxcart trains come through on their long ninety-day trek from the region of Urga, but they are afraid to bring any goods which the troops might seize.

This stoppage of traffic seems at the present time entirely due to Chinese interference, as the Mongols are quite willing to resume the normal life. Foreign firms are doing no business, but are keeping up their staffs in the hope of a resumption.

The picturesque Mongol Market formerly conducted in the dry stream-bed just outside the gate of the Great Wall, with the wool and hide trade which centered there, has now entirely disappeared, and the only activity seen is an occasional motor-car carrying some newly-uniformed officer to the Pengchang camp, a train of camels with gasoline or other military supplies, or a thin line of carts loaded with third-rate products and pulled by bony oxen. Yesterday Andersen, Meyer and Co.'s horsebuyer came out with a hundred ponies for the Shanghai Race Club. He was one week overdue, and then brought only one third of the three hundred lot sent for. The spring has been unusually dry in southeastern Mongolia, and hundreds of horses and cattle are dying from lack of pasturage. The inability of the Chinese troops to feed mounts probably explains their having permitted the Race Club's griffins to be taken out.

Since the stoppage of communications at Kalgan, such Chinese-Mongolian trade as has been continued has been conducted through Paotow, the Upper Yellow River port which is connected by a motor-road with the new railhead at Suiyuan. The Paotow-Urga route is practically the same distance as that from Kalgan, and is free of the 2,000 ft. grade which makes the pass at Kalgan so difficult. War or peace, the Mongol must have his tea, and cart-trains of that necessity are going out from Suiyuan. If interference with trade at Kalgan continues indefinitely, Paotow, in spite of its longer rail-haul from Peking, will capture the bulk of the Mongolian trade, to the great detriment of Kalgan. Work on the Suiyuan railway extension to Paotow is to commence July 1, and the hundred miles of track will, according to the plans of the railway, be in operation within a year. As the outpost of trade for Kansu, Ordos, Sinkiang and southern Mongolia, Paotow seems destined to become a commercial center of great importance. Jardine, Matheson and Co. and the B. A. T. are the foreign firms at present represented there.

BUILDERS HERE OUT ON STRIKE; WASHERMEN ALSO

Walkout Of 2,000 Carpenters And Masons May Become General

LAUNDRYMEN PARADE

Five Hundred March Into Settlement, But Are Turned Back By Police

Two thousand men employed in the building trades in Shanghai—carpenters and their apprentices, masons and wood sawyers—went on strike yesterday and it was predicted last night that the disaffection, which as yet has brought action principally in districts outside the Settlement, would become general before tonight and that the walk-out would be complete throughout the city.

In addition to this, with the hot weather practically overhead and the white collar and a long list of other embellishments nearing their most ephemeral stage, Shanghai finds herself facing a general laundrymen's strike.

The building men are demanding a wage raise of approximately 50 percent while the laundrymen's principal demands concern hours of labor and working conditions. The carpenters and masons who have already laid down their tools were employed principally in Frenchtown and in the areas boarding Great Western, Edinburgh, the Rubicon and Gordon Roads, where there has been considerable building in progress.

SETTLEMENT NOT YET HIT

Thus far the International Settlement is only slightly affected by the laundrymen's strike but in the Frenchtown and Western border districts between 700 and 800 knights of the tub and iron have dropped work and presented a formidable list of demands, the complete concession of which they declare to be the only consideration under which they will return to their tasks.

Meanwhile the strikers are making strenuous efforts to call out the washermen in the Settlement and have scored success in the Sinza district, while a massed advance of nearly 500 strikers into the extensive North Szechuen Road laundry district yesterday morning was only turned back by police intervention—intervention, however, of a mild persuasive character.

"Bolshevik" agitation is credited with the inspiration of the strike by the Chinese and the authorities are looking into reports of organised move to align the laundrymen with employes in other lines of work. It is declared by certain of the Chinese that the move is being directed from Canton, or that "Bolshevik" agents from the South are at the bottom of the trouble.

The strikers' demands give some color to the theory of well organised and carefully considered agitation, for the matter of wage increase has been made a secondary item and the strikers are asking for more working privileges, better conditions and a "chance to better educate themselves."

WANT SHORTER HOURS

The principal demands in a list of seventeen which have been presented by the Washermen's Guild call for shorter working hours, double pay for night work, half-Sundays off and holidays on all the national fete days. In addition to the list drawn up by the Guild, workers of individual establishments and groups of establishments have formulated demands which are being presented to employers.

Between 400 and 500 of the striking washermen, bearing banners and posters setting forth their grievances, came into the Settlement yesterday morning from Frenchtown, where the Guild headquarters are located, and proceeded to North Szechuen Road, which leads into the city's largest laundry district. The strikers were met by Detective Sergeant Ross, who addressed them and finally induced them to return. They were escorted to the French Settlement and passed over the boundary shortly before 11 o'clock. There was no disorder and when the procession came into the French Concession the strikers were met and addressed by the French police, and were warned against breaches of the peace.

All of the washermen in the Sinza district, numbering about 140 in all, have stopped work, it was reported yesterday. Otherwise the Settlement workers are still unaffected, though those across the boundary along Weihaiwei Road have joined the strikers.

About 140 coolies of the Waterworks Company, casual workers, are also on strike, demanding a wage raise.

Congratulations Extended To Judge Skinner Turner By Members Of British Bar

Occasion Is His Appointment In Supreme Court As Successor To Sir Havilland de Sausmarez, To Whom Eloquent Tribute Is Paid

At a gathering made up of a full attendance of members of the British Bar congratulations were extended to Judge Skinner Turner, who recently was appointed Chief Judge of the British Supreme Court in succession to Sir Havilland de Sausmarez.

Among those present for the occasion were Mr. A. G. Mossop, Acting, Crown Advocate and Messrs. H. Browett, J. H. Teesdale, R. E. S. Gregson, S. H. MacKean, J. E. Salmon, J. G. Priestwood, R. F. C. Master, A. J. Hughes, A. C. Holborow, K. E. Newman, H. L. Ward, Langley Smith, E. L. Hartopp, J. O. Anderson, M. B. Brown, A. M. Preston, L. K. Kentwell, R. C. Faithfull, and T. Wing.

MR. MOSSOP SPEAKS

Mr. A. G. Mossop, Acting Crown Advocate, said:

"My Lord, It affords me very great pleasure on behalf of the Members of this Bar to tender to you this morning our united and very sincere congratulations upon the occasion of your appointment as Judge of this Court in succession to Sir Havilland de Sausmarez, whose retirement we understand took effect from May 31.

"Your Lordship's association with this Court, formerly as Assistant Judge and latterly as Acting Judge, has already extended over a period of more than five years and during that time our opportunities have been many of appreciating the marked ability and unfailing courtesy at all times associated with the carrying out of your Lordship's judicial duties. We are sure the pleasure we felt on learning the news of your appointment to fill the vacancy is shared by the entire community, and we feel confident that the cordial relations which have existed for many years between the Bench and Bar of this court will be maintained and continued in the future.

IS BIRTHDAY

"Today we have discovered that it happens to be, by a happy coincidence, the anniversary of your Lordship's birthday, so that in offering you congratulations in connection with your appointment, we should like to add an expression of our best wishes that you may enjoy many happy returns of this day.

"When Sir Havilland de Sausmarez left here last year on Home leave, it was known to some of us that he contemplated the possibility of retiring from his judicial duties during the present year, so that the news of his retirement has not come altogether as a surprise.

"We members of the British Bar desire, however, in assembling here this morning, to express our great regret that we shall no longer have him with us. Sir Havilland can look back upon many years spent in the Near East and in China in the service of his country, and his record is a distinguished one such as any Englishman should be proud of. In this court he presided for a period, a longer period, than did any of his predecessors in office, and that period exceeded 15 years in all. During such time, he carried out his duties with an ability and impartiality which were apparent to all.

"My Lord, we members of this Bar bid farewell to Sir Havilland de Sausmarez with great regret, a feeling I am sure which is shared by all members of this community, both Chinese and foreign. We shall long miss him in this court and the consciousness of this fact will, we hope, help to mitigate the sorrow he must feel on leaving the bench he has so adorned."

REPLY IS MADE

His Lordship, in reply said:

"Mr. Acting Crown Advocate and members of the Bar, I am deeply touched and profoundly grateful to you for what you have said this morning. You gave me when I came here five years ago as a stranger welcome. You have renewed it to me today. It is difficult for me to say more than 'I thank you.' It is not unnatural I think for me to feel very grateful when I get a welcome from members of my own profession.

"Your kindly reference, Mr. Crown Advocate, to the domestic anniversary of my own adds a personal touch to the day's proceedings which really takes them out of the realm of formality. Mr. Crown Advocate, I still have to ask you and the Bar for that help and assistance which judges require. It has been freely and generously given to the Bench of this court in years past, and I do not doubt that I shall ask for it successfully in the future. We judges do require your assistance in the due administration of justice in these courts. May I therefore refer you when you go back to your chambers to the reference in Law Reports, 10 Q. B. D. on page three.

"May I here also add my thanks to the staff of this court who also have to play a large part in the administration of justice. From one and all of them, British and Chinese, I have had loyal and willing support during the time I have been here, and I thank them for it and look confidently forward to it in the future. I should like to add a word of respect to the memory of the late Marshal of this court who died about a year ago on his way home to England on leave.

"In looking forward to the work of this court, one cannot

ALLIES TELL BAVARIANS THEY MUST MEET TERMS

No Concession In Regard To Disarmament, Dictum

REPARATION PAID

First Installment Of Sum Deposited In New York

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 1.—Reuter learns that the British Government has informed Bavaria that no concession in regard to disarmament is possible. Bavaria must toe the line in the same way as Germany, as the fulfilment of the Allied ultimatum is the only way of avoiding serious consequences, both for Bavaria and Germany.

New York, June 1.—The first instalment of Germany's reparation payment to the Allies through the United States, amounting to $45,733,000 was today in the Federal Reserve Bank. The German Government, through four New York banks, completed its deposit yesterday. The payments were not made in actual cash or gold, but in the transfer of banking credits.

Berlin, June 1.—In connection with the Allied ultimatum, the Reichsbank announces its intention to buy gold coin and gold bars. It says it must pay 260 marks for a 20-mark piece, and 37,000 marks for a kilogram of fine gold.

Paris, June 1.—According to advices from Oppeln, despite the Allied High Commission's notification that Allied troops would be quartered in the district to separate the Germans and Poles, the German General Hiefer launched an attack on the direction of Gross-Strehlitz, and captured the villages of Kalnowitz, Kalinoff and Kosniontaw.

The Commission has ordered General Hiefer to stop the fighting; otherwise Allied troops will evacuate the German villages in the industrial region.

Berlin, June 1.—Reconstruction and reconciliation was outlined as the policy of the German Government by the Imperial Chancellor, Dr. Wirth, in a speech in the Reichstag yesterday.

Dr. Wirth said the German Government intended to fulfil its obligations, and gave as an instance its observance of the time limits laid down in the Allied ultimatum.

The Chancellor acknowledged Bavaria's decision to abandon her recalcitrant attitude as regards disarmament. He pointed out that Germany was liable to pay three and a quarter milliards of gold marks, if her 1921 export trade equalled that of last year. He foreshadowed German representations with a view to securing a reduction of the percentage levy on exports, and referred to the prospects of various new taxes.

Dr. Wirth criticised French policy as manifested by the application of the recent sanctions as "calculated to undermine the democratic spirit of Germany." He expressed the hope that Great Britain and the other Allies would give Germany a fair chance, and not increase her existing difficulties.

Referring to Silesia, Dr. Wirth declared that the Germans, under oppression by Korfanty's bands, had undergone insufferable treatment. The Polish rising, he said, was not a spontaneous popular movement, but an artificial rebellion supported from outside. Rebellion, the Imperial Chancellor continued, can never create rights or make Polish a land which has not belonged to Poland for seven hundred years and which never displayed any trace of Polish maternal feeling until it was artificially stimulated recently by Polish strangers.

CHITA ON VERGE OF STARVATION, SAYS 'OBSERVER'

Workmen Held In Line By Machine Guns—Government Hopeful

(Reuter's Pacific Service)

Peking, May 31.—The following is the continuation of the report of the Chinese official observer, dated Chita, May 18:

For not having kept a proper look-out among the troops that he commanded, General Eiche Commander-in-Chief of the forces of the Far Eastern Republic, has been removed. He at first refused to accept dismissal, saying that he had been appointed by Trotsky and it was not until a telegram had been received from the latter that Eiche left Chita. He then returned to Soviet Russia by special train, taking his staff with him.

Three weeks ago a strike occurred among the railway workers at Chita, owing to their not having received the usual food allowance. As trouble was expected, machine guns were mounted at places of vantage in the workmen's quarters. The attitude of the workmen was very defiant.

The authorities, however, managed to scrape together a quantity of food which was given to the men, and the trouble was thus averted, as the men then returned to work. No secret is made here of the shortage of flour and of the fact that the population is half-starved.

The Government hopes to improve the situation, now that riverine communications have been restored. It is plain that if an improvement does not take place trouble among the workmen may be expected; for the men, although willing to wait a little longer for their wages, cannot carry on without having their hunger appeased.

Another batch of refugees 1,500 in all, passed over the Onon bridge after it was restored. As to the number of refugees still at Verkhne-Udinsk, I am given to understand that there are about 5,000 including those in hospitals.

The Chinese Workers' Union whose local executive consists of Chinese students returned from Moscow, is doing a lot of good work in the matter of repatriating Chinese from Soviet Russia. This Union has no funds whatsoever and the students are themselves poor. They are nevertheless negotiating with the Russian Authorities about getting their countrymen out of Russia.

Recently they sent 72 Chinese home without having to pay fares, the Chinese agreeing to work for seven days on the Onon bridge construction without pay their food being supplied by the railway authorities.

Chinese merchants and traders are receiving good treatment from the Authorities of the Far Eastern Republic and are doing a profitable business in these regions.

I can confirm my previous report about the doings of General Chu Lan-ting. When he arrived at Chita he was met by a special guard of honor and an automobile was placed at his disposal during the whole of his stay here.

As he had no proper credentials he was not able, of course, to discuss anything officially with the Far Eastern Authorities, nor was he able to commit the Chinese Government in any way hence the former began to wonder why he had come to Chita and began to make inquiries.

They learned that the car load of flour and other goods he had brought with him belonged to merchants and that it had been sold. Likewise a good quantity of alcohol brought on his car by his servants was seized by the Chita militia, when it was taken from the train, and loaded on a cart, the escort then disappearing.

His departure from Chita was not so auspicious as his arrival, for instead of a guard of honor and music he was presented with a bill for railway transport for three cars from Manchuli and one back to Manchuli. General Chu disputed this bill, which was for over $2,000 and it was eventually reduced to $1,000 which he paid. As can well be understood the arrival at Chita of Chinese officials without proper credentials (in this case the Heilungkiang authorities had no information regarding General Chu's trip) merely creates a bad impression upon the Chita authorities.

Such contretemps, therefore, should be avoided in future. Otherwise the good relations which exist between the Chinese and the Far Eastern Republics may be severely affected.

Vladivostok, June 2.—The Chita Government is making urgent preparations to establish an anti-Kappel front at Iman, where Red reinforcements are arriving. It is reported that Chita's plan is for the Amur division to retake Nikolsk-Ussurisk.

Advices from Blagoveschtchensk state that river gunboats have been dispatched to Iman. A call for troops has reached Blagoveschtchensk from Habarovsk but it is reported that the troops have refused to proceed. The local troops at Habarovsk are badly disaffected, and numbers have deserted with their arms.

All the peasants' committees in the villages around Nikolsk-Ussurissk have declared their recognition of the new Priamur Government.

Carl Crow's Handbook

Residents of China, travelers and all those whose interests in any way touch upon the country will welcome the appearance of a new edition, the third, of Mr. Carl Crow's 'Travelers' Handbook for China.'

The new volume affords another illustration of how swiftly conditions are shifting in China. As the author says in his preface, when the second edition of the book was prepared a few years ago no effort was spared to bring every detail of its contents up to date and the revision was so thorough that it was believed there would be but little to do in bringing out a third edition. It was found, however, when the task of revision for the third edition was taken up that China had changed so tremendously in recent years that scarcely a paragraph of the second edition could be allowed to remain without modification.

The new handbook, which covers Hongkong as well as China, is somewhat more comprehensive than those that preceded it. It is bound in limp green leather of a shape to fit the pocket and in its contents the resident of China as well as the newcomer to the country will find much of value and interest. That the book has been accepted as fully authoritative by the leading travel agencies throughout the world is shown by the fact that it has been placed on sale at all the offices of Thomas, Cook and Son.

Though the new volume possesses particular value to the traveler, as it contains nine maps and plans with numerous illustrations, it is in no sense to be regarded merely as a guide book.

The student and others interested in China will find in its pages in condensed form a mass of historical and other information that deals with the climate of the country, customs, characteristics and religions of its people, commercial methods, transportation routes, the arts of the Chinese from earliest times, the country's government and many other subjects. Separate chapters are devoted to the leading centers of the country and it would be difficult, in fact, to name any important interest of the Chinese or of the foreigner who resides in China that is not dealt with in the new handbook.

help looking backward at the same time, and we realise as you say that it is after something like 15 or 16 years' service that Sir Havilland has retired. He came here and really brought our present Order in Council into force and made it a success. His legal acumen, his quick grasp of facts and principles, his energy coupled with his real kindliness of heart made him a very difficult man to follow. He has retired in the heyday of his powers and my wish is joined with yours to him and Lady de Sausmarez that they may live long to enjoy a well-earned rest. I also join with you in the hope that the authorities at Home may be able to utilise his powers in some way.

Smiles from the Mixed Court

If the great crime detectors of fiction had only been up in the system employed by Chinese Police Constable 1237 we might have had Sherlock Holmes in pocket edition and the output of Mr. Gaboriau might have been cut to two or three slender volumes. C.P.C. 1237 does no steeplechasing after clews.

The officer mentioned was pacing along Whangpoo Road a couple of days ago when he noticed Lee Ah-foh coming up the street with a cargo of chickens. The birds were slung from either end of the customary bamboo in the usual round wicker containers. There were twelve birds to the container and they appeared supremely contented—there was no overcrowding, successfully lobbied against by the S. S. P. C. A. and punishable by a fine. Everything appeared as orthodox as a Sunday roast. The incomparable Sherlock wouldn't even have been moved to call his friend Watson's attention to the spectacle. M. Lecoq might have paused long enough to click off the deduction of an a la King item on the menu of a boarding house with green blinds a week from Tuesday. Beyond that he would have suspected nothing. This is elementary stuff to C.P.C. 1237.

Walking briskly up to Lee, the constable remarked, with a significant inflection:

"Ahem!"

Without even attempting to deny it, Lee let his cargo drop squawking to the pavement and started to keep an imperative engagement in a remote part of the Settlement. The C.P.C. sounded a signal upon his whistle and shouted a few instructions to his brother officer at the next corner, and the latter chased Lee into a shop and gathered him.

At the station Lee was disinclined to talk, so Detective Ah Pau was assigned to the case. He strolled down Woosung Road and on to the wharves, where he found Dzung Ah-kwe rushing excitedly about inquiring of everyone adjacent if they had seen anything of two dozen red leghorns.

"I didn't steal the chickens," Lee protested to the Magistrate next morning. "It was an entirely different man who swiped them. He left them sitting in the street and I picked them up. That's all. I admit that I was convicted once before and was expelled from the Settlement, but I was just paying a visit here and didn't intend to stay."

Lee is going to stay three years.

AT HOME AGAIN

Theft of an iron bar from the scene of building operations at the corner of Canton Road and The Bund was the charge read over to Yang Ah-kwung when he had been ushered into the prisoner's stall.

Li Ong-piau stepped into the witness box and stated that he had seen Yang come inside the bamboo enclosure, and pick up the metal. The accused had nearly cleared the gate, he said, when he got back with the policeman.

That was just it, Yang complained to the Court. If Li hadn't been so hasty and premature in the matter of conclusions and constables he would have seen that the witness had picked up the bar only to examine it. Li, he thought, must have a mean sort of mind.

The Court glanced rapidly over the record of Yang's four previous trips to the local Bastile and issued him a ticket for another year's board there. After that the Settlement will know him no more—if he follows out orders.

Paris Swindler Gets 300,000 Paper Marks

Locks Bank Messenger In His Office While He Escapes With Booty

Paris, April 23.—While France is waiting to see the color of some German money there is one Frenchman who has plenty of it. He has 300,000 paper marks, and this is how he got them.

Some days ago he hired two rooms as an office. Then from a neighboring cafe one morning he telephoned a firm of money exchangers to ask if it could send to him at his office 300,000 marks. Two men arrived bringing the money. All three sat down around a table and worked out the purchase price. When it was settled the purchaser rose and picking up the German money, remarked: "I'll get 65,000 francs out of my safe and lock this up."

He walked into the other room of the office, leaving the two men. For some time they sat and waited. Then they became suspicious. At last they tried the door. It was locked, and by the time they had broken the windows and summoned help their man and their 300,000 German marks had disappeared in a green taxicab. That is the only clue any one has to his identity.

Japanese Prince Feted By French

(Reuter's Service)

Paris, June 1.—The Japanese Crown Prince today visited President Millerand, and presented him with the insignia of the Order of the Chrysanthemum. He was afterwards entertained at luncheon by President and Madame Millerand. Among the guests were M. Briand, the Premier, M. Peret, President of the Chamber of Deputies, Marshal Joffre, Marshal Foch, Marshal Petain, and M. Claudel, Ambassador to Japan.

The President proposed the health of his guest in cordial terms. Inter alia, he said: "The closest and most confidential relations—intellectually as well as from the military and political standpoints—exist between the two countries, and for a long time they have united us in intimate and fruitful bonds." His Imperial Highness would, by his visit to the battlefields, "pay our glorious warriors the homage of a nation which is a good judge of courage and honor."

Prince Hirohito replied in fitting terms, saying he had been profoundly touched by the new proof of the feelings of friendship which so happily united Japan and France. They did not forget in Japan, he said, the eminent role played by French missions in the adaptation of the Japanese to the methods and scientific progress of western nations. He would during his stay in France see how an energetic and industrious people repaired the ruins of the war by its labor, and laid in order and in peace the foundations of a new prosperity.

A hundred Japanese naval officers and 500 seamen arrived by special train from Havre this afternoon, to visit the principle places of interest in Paris. They will be followed by others.

The pickpocket, who, with the complainant, testified against the inspector, was sentenced to eighteen months and re-expulsion from the Settlement. Mr. H. D. Rodger appeared for the inspector and one of the tramways officials testified to the man's previous excellent record. The police testimony showed him to have been convicted and sentenced thirteen years ago for theft while a member of the police department.

Twenty-five motor cases were heard in the special traffic court yesterday and fines ranging from $3 to $50 were imposed for various violations. There were two assessments for the higher figure, one for $35 and several for $25.

The trial of the Chinese who murdered his wife and tried to murder his daughter with an axe in their home near Lay Road was concluded yesterday, judgment being reserved. The accused admitted his act and declared that he had committed the murder because he believed his wife unfaithful.

Grandson Of 'Tiger' Gets Jail Sentence

Clemenceau Refused To Intervene When Told Of Embezzlement Charges

Paris, April 23.—Ex-Premier Clemenceau's grandson, Fred Georges Gatineau, was condemned "in absence" today by a Paris Judge to two years' imprisonment and a fine of 50,000 francs for embezzlement. Some time ago, when an inquiry was begun into his affairs, Gatineau slipped over to England, thinking, perhaps, that the affair would be hushed up out of respect to his grandfather's name.

But Clemenceau, when he was informed that proceedings were to be begun against his grandson, repeated the action of King Henry IV. of England when his son, the future Henry V., was brought before the English Justices. He refused to intervene and let justice take its course.

"My grandson!" he exclaimed when he was told. "I should worry! Lock him up. That's all he deserves."

If he ever comes back to France the young man will be imprisoned. The affair began last October, when a Paris manufacturer named Detilleux lodged a complaint in a civil court against Gatineau for issuing a worthless check. According to the story told in court, Gatineau undertook to purchase twenty automobiles from the American stock for Detilleux, who advanced him 140,000 francs. The automobiles were never delivered, and Detilleux demanded payment with interest of 15,000 francs. Gatineau sent him a check for the amount, which the bank dishonored.

Six other similar complaints were lodged against Gatineau by other manufacturers, the checks being for various amounts from 600,000 to 150 francs. Three of these were dismissed by the bench, but Gatineau was proved to be a defaulter for 245,150 francs. Since he took the boat for England nothing has been heard of the young man, but his grandfather isn't worrying, friends of the family say.

A Michigan Mother's Opinion of Baby's Own Tablets.

The demand for Baby's Own Tablets is enormous and grows larger every year, the reason being that, having once tried them for their little ones, mothers of babies and young children never care to be without the Tablets in the house, ready for emergencies either night or day.

Writes Mrs. F. Emery, of 8 Barclay Place, Grand Rapids, Mich., "My baby was not very well and was cross and troublesome. I gave her several doses of Baby's Own Tablets, and they did her so much good that I would not be without them for many times the amount they cost. I strongly advise every mother to give them a fair trial."

Baby's Own Tablets are guaranteed absolutely free from any opiate or narcotic, and to be equally harmless and helpful to the youngest infant as to the child of 6 or more years. They promptly banish infantile indigestion, constipation, colic, diarrhœa, colds, feverishness, and teething troubles, bring restful sleep, improve the appetite and promote regular development.

McTYEIRE PUPILS IN THE BLUEBIRD SCORE SUCCESS

To the full houses that have attended performances of the Bluebird given by the senior class of McTyeire School at the Lyceum theater altogether pleasing entertainment has been afforded. The production is wholly ambitious but it is an attempt attended by great success. The staging, costuming and lighting, all in the best of taste were altogether artistic and effective.

If the criterion of a play may be gauged from the enjoyment derived from it by the players then the Bluebird is an unqualified success, for certainly the members of the cast threw themselves into their parts with all zest and it was apparent that they shared in the pleasure that they gave.

As an amateur production it is probably not too much to say that it is the best that has been presented in Shanghai and particular credit is due to Miss Clara Park, head of the department of expression of McTyeire School, who in selecting the cast was limited to the membership of the senior class of the school.

Tyltyl and Mytyl, the leading characters, were particularly well done, but this, in fact, may be said of all the others. The costumes of Light, Night, Water and Fire were especially striking and artistic and the staging of the Hall of Happiness and Babyland was altogether remarkable.

The production is to be repeated tomorrow matinee and night.

Record Throngs See Fine Race In Derby At Epsom

Royal Family Vociferously Cheered—Weather Perfect

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 1.—Derby day at Epsom was favoured with bright sunshine, and the crowd is computed to have attained record dimensions. Among those present were the King and Queen, the Prince of Wales, the Duke of York, Prince Henry and the Duke of Connaught. The royal procession was vociferously cheered as it drove down the course.

The result of the Derby was as follows:

1.—Mr. J. B. Joel's Humorist (Donoghue).
2.—Lord Astor's Craig an Eran (Brennan).
3.—Mr. J. Watson's Lemonora (J. Childs).

Also ran: Bright Orb (Burns); Glorioso (Carslake); Golden Dale (F. Bullock); Pucka Sahib (Winter); Alan Breck (A. Balding); Eaglehawk (F. Leach); Westward Ho (A. Smith); Highlander (G. Hulme); Roman Fiddle (Lane); Leighton (M. Beary); Granely (V. Smyth); Euphrosynus (Cooper); The Bohemian (O'Neill); Le Traquet (Garner); Our Prince (Walsh); Beauregard (Strydom); Granite (Whalley); Pride of Ulster (Barnett); Goldfinder (Gardner); and Blinklow (Jelliss).

Granely and Our Prince were left at the post and took no part in the race, but came under the starter's orders. Alan Breck took the lead, which he maintained until four furlongs from home, when Humorist, Craig an Eran and Lemonora joined issue. A great struggle ensued between the two first-named, Humorist winning a grand race by a neck from Craig an Eran, with Lemonora three lengths behind. Alan Breck finished fourth. The time was 2 minutes, 36-1/5 seconds.

Starting prices: 6 to 1 Humorist; 5 to 1 Craig an Eran; 8 to 1 Lemonora.

Place betting: 6 to 4 Lemonora, others in proportion.

There were no trains running to Epsom owing to the coal strike; nevertheless the multitude which flocked to see the Classic race was greater than ever, thousands upon thousands trekking along the roads in every sort of conveyance and on foot. Everybody was in the most cheery spirits—a striking psychological commentary on the country's strike troubles.

For the first time in history the road traffic to the Derby was controlled by wireless. The airship R-33 set out from Pulham with a Scotland Yard official on board, and her work in regulating the traffic and reporting stoppages evoked the appreciative message from Epsom—"Your information has proved of great service."

The airship was not allowed to approach nearer than three miles from Epsom, lest her shadow should frighten the horses.

Paul, Missionary, Returning To China

(China Press Correspondence)

Chuchow, May 31.—Alexander Paul, formerly of Wuhu, Anhwei, a missionary widely known in central China, who has been in America for some years, will arrive in Shanghai in June. He is coming on a special mission in behalf of the United Christian Missionary Society and their workers in China.

Ni Ping-wen, nephew of ex-Tuchun Ni Shih-chung, is causing considerable trouble in Anhwei. During his uncle's illness he gained control of the pay roll of the soldiers and has never turned same over to the new Tuchun, Chang Wen-seng. He now is gaining control, as far as possible, of the mining resources of the province. Last winter he attempted to force the provincial leaders to make him civil governor but the Peking authorities refused to ratify his nomination. In the recent elections for members of the Peking Parliament he freely and openly used money to get his own henchmen elected. Those who opposed him he accused of being Bolshevists and sent policemen to search their homes and threaten them with imprisonment. In three of the larger cities he broke up the schools by bringing such threats to bear upon the school principals who fled from their work to escape arrest.

Order Pleadings In Ezra Action

The claim brought by Mr. Ellis Ezra against his brother, Mr. Isaac Ezra for a declaration that the former is entitled to an equity in certain local properties came up for mention in the British Supreme Court yesterday, when pleadings were ordered on motion of counsel. Mr. Reader Harris appeared for the plaintiff and Mr. E. L. Hartopp for the defendant. It will be recalled that an interim injunction restraining the defendant from disposing of the properties was granted last week. The plaintiff's contention is that the property formed security for a loan.

In The U. S. Court For China

L. Van der Stegen, Plaintiff, vs. Neuss, Hesslein and Company, Inc., Defendant.

Cause No. 1032

Order filed June 1, 1921.

Acting Clerk.

SYLLABUS

1. Pleading: Waiver. Where a party demurs to a pleading he waives the right to more specific statement.

J. B. Davies, Esquire, for the motion.

Stirling Fessenden, Esquire, contra.

Lobingier, J.

On May 24, 1921, an order was entered in this cause overruling the demurrer to the amended petition and granting defendant ten days within which to answer the same. On May 28 defendant filed a motion to require plaintiff to make said petition "more definite, certain and specific." Plaintiff's counsel contends that all of the essential particulars already appear in the amended petition; but whether this be true or not, it seems clear that defendant is not entitled to the relief now sought for the rule is that

"The filing of the demurrer was a waiver of the right to file a motion for a more specific statement."

It would seem also that the rule should apply more strongly, whereas here defendant was expressly directed to answer and where no relief was sought or obtained for the filing of this motion.

The latter is accordingly overruled but by agreement of counsel the time originally allowed for answer is extended for one week.

By the Court.

CHARLES S. LOBINGIER.
Judge.

HUGHES FRAMING POLICY ON RUSSIA

Washington Opinion Favors Effective Help When Reds Are Overthrown

FACTOR IN WORLD REVIVAL

Selfish Aims By Other Nations Feared In The Period Of Restoration

Washington, April 23.—Among the questions regarded here as especially important in the bringing of foreign problems to the front, Russia continues to be considered one of the first, although for the moment practical action regarding America's attitude toward Russia has been eclipsed by other urgent problems such as German reparations and the status of Yap.

While it might appear that the reply of Secretary Hughes to the Soviet overtures toward direct trade relations, and his more recent letter to Samuel Gompers on the Russian economic situation, have done away with Slav questions which demanded immediate settlement, nevertheless the whole larger range of the problem is being considered. Serious study is being devoted to all the involved elements affecting American interests on a broad scale.

It is recognised in responsible quarters that, in a general way, the settlement of the Russian problem is a prerequisite to the peace and stability of the world. At the same time it has become more generally appreciated that general world conditions, and especially the economic welfare of Europe, are of direct interest and importance to the United States. European economic disability reacts on American trade and industry. The depression in American economic life, it is felt, has been intimately connected with the financial and industrial effects of the war.

The independent political course which the United States is steering and President Harding's reluctance to participate in the present League of Nations involved no conception that European or Asiatic questions are of no concern to the United States especially where economic considerations are involved. On the contrary, President Harding, both at the opening of Congress and the unveiling of the Bolivar statue in New York City, disclosed his conviction as to the connection between American political and economic life and developments beyond the Atlantic and Pacific. The Administration is to aid in bringing the world to a basis of peace and political stability as a foundation for the resumption of normal economic activities.

BASE HOPE ON A FREE RUSSIA

There is a growing belief in Administration circles that the Russian policy enunciated by former Secretary Colby, although admirably fitting the situation as it existed for a year, is not sufficient for the future. That policy is considered to have been negative in its essence. It refused to deal with the Bolsheviki and opposed the dismemberment of Russia.

The time appears to be approaching when a positive policy of co-operation with Russia shaken free from the tyranny of the Bolshevist regime at Moscow will be demanded. On the character of such practical co-operation with a self-supporting Russia and the measure of activity on the part of the United States, will depend the importance which in the light of American interests, is attached to a speedy and proper consummation of the process of restoration.

That the fall of the Bolshevik is approaching is the opinion in informed circles. The uprisings in Russia and the desperate attempts of Lenin to save his power by half measures are held to be among the signs that the communistic experiment is falling. The view is expressed that the greatest difficulties which the Russian people will have to face will really appear with the fall of the Bolshevist regime. The chief inheritance which Russia will receive from the Red regime will be economic and political disorganisation. Russia will have to be practically rebuilt from its foundations.

The task of reconstruction will rest squarely on the shoulders of the people themselves. Russia, when the chance is afforded, will be capable of the effort, is the confident opinion of those who feel that the past of the nation, its history and genius warrant that conviction.

The rapidity of the undertaking, as well as its outcome, will greatly depend on the measure of aid and co-operation received, and especially on the general political atmosphere that surrounds Russia during the difficult period of restoration. The natural tendency for Russia, it is believed, is to develop into a strong and peaceful democratic state with a satisfied peasant population as the basis of its strength.

AIM AT FUTURE STABILITY

With its vast expanse of territory and its natural resources Russia, it is held, should be essentially a stable and unaggressive state in order to carry forward needed development. More than any other large country she needs peace for the education of her people and the development of her resources. For some years to come, several generations at least, the situation, it is thought, will demand concentration on internal problems of political organisation and economic development. To achieve results, it is felt, Russia should seek international peace with a view to concentration on domestic problem.

Both America and the Russian people are vitally concerned that there be no wars, and that expensive armaments be limited. There can be common cause between the United States and a restored Russia, it is said, founded on liberal democratic principles, looking toward sound economic relationship among nations, developing along lines of co-operation, with equality of trade opportunity.

Such a Russia, satisfied in her settlements, conceptrated on her own interior developments, working along liberal lines, would be one of the greatest stabilisers of political and economic conditions in Europe. For this reason influential opinion here favors the restoration of a strong democratic Russia, and urges association with her as a natural partner in trying to restore those conditions in the world that would best respond to the American hope for peace and economic prosperity.

There is a growing conviction that such a consummation cannot be reached and that Russia would be diverted into unfortunate courses if the process of restoration is forced to develop under conditions where Russian national feelings are hurt. It is not surprising that certain countries should attempt to take advantage of Russia's temporary disability to satisfy selfish aspirations.

The liberal view which the United States has entertained toward the reconstitution of Russia along democratic lines is not shared by all the great powers. There is a danger that particular foreign Governments might look favorably upon the weakening of Russia. It was imperial Germany's ambition, as revealed in the Brest-Litovsk treaty, to cut her away from the sea by creating a ring of small independent States which, having insufficient economic resources to maintain their independence, were booked to become vassals practically of a triumphant German imperialism and used as footholds for the economic exploitation of a weakened and defeated Russia. This policy affected both the Baltic and the Caucasian boundaries of Russia, which were linked with the ambitions of the German imperialists regarding the Berlin-to-Bagdad scheme.

OTHER INTERESTS FEARED

With Germany beaten down, other and different national interests, each in its own domain, have arisen and, it is suspected, are endeavoring to accomplish what Germany had in view—to cut Russia away from the sea, drive her back into the mold of a peasant State of the seventeenth century and weaken and eliminate her as a great power, politically and economically.

Washington does not feel that the prospect of disabling Russia would redound to the interests either of the Russian people or the United States. It would create a prolonged situation of instability and intrigue and lead eventually to open conflict, it is feared, throughout the eastern stretch of the Old World. The Russian people naturally would be expected to revolt against any such humiliation. The national reaction, embittered with the idea of being deprived of participation in the benefits of the alleged victory over Germany, to which Russia contributed heavily, would favor a triumph of imperialistic and militaristic tendencies. There are those who feel that it might turn back Russia to the instability and war that marked the eighteenth century in Russian history before the Slav settled down within natural economic boundaries bordering the sea.

Instead of serving as a great stabiliser, Russia might thus become an arena of permanent contest. Economic development—and Russia is sorely needed in the world's program for economic reconstruction—would be impossible. The United States would lose a great field looming as a promising area for economic co-operation.

The possibilities that favor American business enterprise in a restored Russia, built on democratic foundations, are fully understood here. Responsible American business opinion has been disposed to discard the offerings of the Soviet. It has held the view that American business cannot develop before conditions are stabilised. It has looked toward the future and larger prospects of the situation.

The American political tradition is that trade should not depend on special privileges or spheres of influence. Success must depend, according to this formula, on inherent stability and integrity in the countries where trade is to be developed. The contention is that the stronger and more stable Russia becomes the greater the prospect of business. Conversely, it is argued that Russia weakened or dismembered, while opening opportunities for countries that base their economic expansion on political and economic vassalage, would dim the prospect of American business.

Politically and economically, the United States has nothing to lose and everything to gain from the restoration of a strong and democratic Russia. Opinion grows in Washington that American policy toward Russia during the expected period of self-restoration should be guided by this conception.

It is felt also that America's interests do not coincide with those of certain other nations, and that an American policy of friendship and co-operation with a self-restoring Russia, while not interfering with her internal political concerns, but encouraging every constructive democratic process here, is a course that will eventually have to be steered alone.

Paris Ex-Poilu Shot By War Godmother

Her Crime Of Passion Follows The Girl's Engagement To Another Suitor

Paris, April 19.—A young woman's strange crime of passion that is a tragic aftermath of the war is thrilling Paris today. Like many another lonely soldier, Louis Houillier found, through columns of a newspaper, his war godmother, Antoinette Raynaud, living in the outskirts of the capital. An acquaintance begun by letter ripened into love, and after demobilisation Houillier came to live in the same street as the young woman. Then they quarreled, and Antoinette became engaged to another man, who insisted, as a condition of the marriage, that she end her acquaintance with her former lover.

She agreed, but her good-by meeting with Houillier proved too much for her resolution. Tormented by the jealousy aroused by his bitter last words, unwilling to live with him and unable to live without him, she took a desperate resolution. She informed Houillier that she had broken with her fiance and asked him to leave Paris with her, arranging a rendezvous at the entrance of a lonely lane.

He came, and there in the darkness she shot him four times with a revolver and left him for dead. Then she returned to her apartment and barred the door, with the intention of taking her own life. But her courage failed, and when, hours later, after Houillier had been discovered and rushed, still breathing, to a hospital, the police hammered at her door Antoinette found voice to refuse them admission.

It was only when the police threatened to flood the apartment with asphyxiating gas that she yielded, and they found her trembling, with the revolver she did not dare use still in her hand.

Exchange Fluctuations

Asia Banking Corporation

June 2, 1921.

Spot and forward bar silver were each down ¼d. in London yesterday.

The New York price advanced to 57⅝ and the London-New York cross rate to 391¾. The changes in the official rates today were a drop in the Yen rate to 75 and in the Franc rate to 725 and an advance in the Rupee rate to 249 and in the Gold Dollar rate to 62.

The market was steady during the day and business was done at about the same rates as yesterday for Sterling and about ¼ better for Gold Dollars.

The market was featureless and quiet. The Continent is reported to have sold silver in London yesterday.

Owing to the improvement in the Continental exchanges there was again some demand for Francs today.

Freight Market

Messrs. Wheelock and Company write as follows in their freight market report of yesterday:

The situation in our Outward Freight markets is as follows:

TO UNITED KINGDOM AND CONTINENT

The recent reductions in the rates of freight homewards do not appear to have brought about any increase in the bookings so far and the berth remains quiet.

TO UNITED STATES VIA PACIFIC AND VIA PANAMA AND SUEZ

Things are stagnant across the Pacific and not much better via the Canal Routes where there are still a certain amount of skins and a little general cargo going forward at greatly reduced rates.

COASTWISE

This market has continued dull during the past fortnight but there are slight signs of an improvement setting in as there is a certain amount of enquiry from the North and River Ports although only small quantities as yet.

As American Labor Sees The British Miners

(Literary Digest)

EVERY industry owes its workers a living; if it cannot support them, it has no right to exist, or if it must exist because it supplies a public need, then let the Government take it over and run it without profit. This is the creed of the more radical railroad-workers in the U. S., and if we may credit the recent dispatches, it is about what the British miners' demand for nationalisation boils down to. In labor circles in the U. S., however, few except the most radical look upon the British coal strike as a fight for Socialism or even for nationalisation except as incidental to the fight for higher wages and better living conditions. American labor has been watching the British upheaval and we are all interested in knowing what it thinks. We have, therefore, telegraphed the chief labor organs and leaders, and here summarize their replies. A conservative labor weekly like the Indianapolis Union improves the occasion to assert its own opposition to "government ownership as a matter of principle," while on the other hand Mr. J. H. Walker, a miner who is president of the Illinois Federation of Labor, reminds us that the last convention of the United Mine Workers of America "declared in favor of nationalisation of the coal-mines of the United States." Mr. Walker makes no direct comment on the British strike situation, but presents a general argument for nationalisation in the U. S. He says: "Coal is a natural resource and a national necessity. The men who do the work, producing and distributing it, should get the wages hours, conditions of labor, and treatment that they are entitled to as human beings; and the public should get the fuel for just what it cost to give the producers and distributers those things." Nationalisation, we are told, would eliminate profiteering, dangerous and unhealthful conditions in the mines, and all unfairness in operation. Of course, there would be opposition and sabotage on the part of the interests affected during the transition period. But,

"If the changes were made after sufficient time had elapsed to remove those influences, and the mines were being operated by the Government and influenced by men with these motives—even with the weaknesses of the possibility of graft, stealing, and government officials using their position for political purposes—I think, considering all those things, that those who produce and distribute the coal would get better treatment in every way, and the public would get cheaper and better coal and the fuel resources of our country would be conserved for the people instead of being destroyed as things are now."

Mr. Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor, regrets that "odium" has been cast on the British miners by the "interpretation of their resistance to an unwarranted wage reduction as an insidious attempt to nationalise the mines." Mr. Woll emphasizes the denials of any such purpose, which have been made by representatives of the miners, though he thinks the conditions under which they have been working might warrant them in demanding nationalisation. He looks upon the chief events of the strike, including the collapse of the Triple Alliance, as proof that the Gompers method of keeping the unions out of politics is better than the British policy.

"The English labor-leaders have failed to see that to throw purely economic question into the parliamentary arena is to divert questions of difference between employers and workers into issues between producers and consumers," and thus put labor at a disadvantage. A number of our labor papers base their justification of the British miners' demand for nationalisation chiefly on the peculiar conditions existing at present in the British coal industry. It seems to the Seattle Union Record, for instance, that nationalisation "is the only logical way out of an otherwise impossible situation." "Coal is produced in England under such varying conditions that wages and working rulers that are highly profitable to one colliery may mean the death of another." Nationalisation, "or rather the lumping of the profits that the miners propose," would enable unprofitable mines whose product the country needs "to operate for the benefit of the country and without injury to the workers."

The Butte Bulletin holds that the profit-pooling proposition has been adopted as "the only means to prevent wholesale lowering of the living standard"; it "is not the solution of the question, but it is designed to shift some of the burden from the backs of the workers to the profit-making classes." In some British mines, similarly notes the San Francisco Labor Clarion, "a ton of coal can be brought to the surface with much less expenditure of energy than in others, and to ask the miners in the poor mines to work for less than those in the good mines has in it the elements of injustice," and the miners' demands have been made simply with the idea of wiping out this difficulty in the future. The Minnesota Daily Star sees nothing Socialistic about the British miners' demands, but simply an attempt to get a living wage. As this Minneapolis labor journal explains the miners' position:

"National control of the coal industry during the war brought into use many mines that could not have been profitably operated privately. Decontrol, which the Government purposed to effect March 31, meant either that these poorer pits had to be closed down or operated at reduced cost. . . .

"Refusal to have their wages based on the necessities of the poorest mines does not indicate that the miners want to destroy the coal industry. It is simply an announcement that they object to having the prosperity of the industry rest on the maximum degree of exploitation that can be put into effect."

The New Republic, which generally sides with the workers in disputes like the British strike, takes a like view of the miners' case, and reaches the conclusion that—

"Coal cannot be mined cheaply enough under the present system to insure the future of British industry unless the miners accept wages decidedly inferior in purchasing power to the prewar level, and prewar wages were shockingly inadequate. The miners are therefore forced to demand a new system. What they now appear to be moving toward is a pooling of mining profits so that wages may be fixt at a level which the average mining company can afford, instead of at the level fixt by the weaker companies."

This, according to the New York weekly, would be practically a "subsidy paid by the stronger companies to the weaker." It would mean that labor would get part of the extra profit which certain employers reap, not because of their superior ability, but because "of their superior natural advantages." The demand, therefore, might be considered revolutionary "if we look upon coal-mining as essentially a means of producing profits and royalties," but not if we consider it "primarily a national interest." The New Republic is inclined to think that if Britain is ever to have coal enough to meet the nation's growing needs, it will be only through a reorganisation of the industry "for which an initiative can only be found in labor."

Socialist papers naturally argue strongly for nationalisation. It seems to the editor of Real Democracy (Chicago) that "no permanent industrial peace is possible in any country until its mines, railroads, power, water, and other basic industries upon which common prosperity depends are nationalised and run for service only." "If national ownership or government control of basic industries is a good thing for the people in time of war why," asks the Schenectady Citizen, "is it not also a good thing in time of peace?" According to the New York Call—

"What is happening in England is that a small minority of owners and lessees are exploiting the coal reserves of England for their own enrichment. They waste the product, leave large quantities under ground that can never be recovered, rob masses of miners, and insist on intensifying the robbery by wage-reductions and receive support of the Government for their feudalistic privileges."

The Socialist Appeal to Reason (Girard, Kan.) seems to be almost alone in its belief that "England's great strike is not the use of the industrial weapon for immediate economic advantages, but is merely the use of industrial power for political ends," that it is "a strike for control of the government." The Appeal predicts that—

"England is about to have the experience of having its government run by shrewd and cautious Laborites. We don't think England will be any the worse for this, for England couldn't get into a worse economic predicament than that in which she has been for more than a year. If anything, these Laborites will improve England's position, and at the same time serve to adjust international questions on the basis of a sane liberalism. England is going to learn that it may expect great strikes every few months unless it gives a Laborite the keys to Downing Street. And when England does learn this lesson its strikes will stop."

Greatest Land Estate

Henry Miller, Cattle King, Had Vast Tracts, Which Are About To Be Sold Piecemeal

BY FRANK P. STOCKBRIDGE

"I thought once that I would own the whole State of California," Henry Miller told a friend a few years before his death in 1916, at the age of 88. "I would have owned half of it if I had not made the mistake of buying land in Nevada and Oregon also, and my son, if he had lived, could have bought the other half."

Although he failed to achieve his early ambition—for the ownership of the entire State was his serious purpose as a young man, his friends have said—Henry Miller left behind him the largest area of land under a single ownership ever assembled in America, probably in the world, if private individual ownership and not the feudal domains of Kings is alone considered. Now this vast acreage, larger than the dominion of many a prince or kinglet, larger in the aggregate than several of the smaller States of the Union, is to be broken up and sold piecemeal to the highest bidders. Thus ends the romance of the last of the Cattle Barons.

Eight hundred thousand acres in California—more than 1,250 square miles —nearly as much in Oregon and half as much in Nevada, constituting the entire holdings of Miller and Lux, Inc., are to be put upon the market at once, according to dispatches from California in the past week. Pressure of public opinion, which holds that such a great estate should not be allowed to remain under single ownership is the significant reason put first by David Brown, Secretary of the corporation, in announcing this decision, although difficulties of management and other reasons are intimated. The "other reasons" doubtless have a bearing upon the effort of the United States Government and the State of California to collect an inheritance tax of approximately $10,000,000 on the forty-million-dollar estate that Henry Miller transferred by deed of gift to his only child, Mrs. J. Leroy Nickel of San Francisco, and her husband, three years before his death—a transfer which the tax authorities contended had been made in anticipation of death.

NO SUCCESSOR TO MILLER

Those who knew Henry Miller in life will not be surprised to learn that his heirs and successors have found nobody qualified to step into his shoes in the management of the great cattle ranches that he established during a lifetime of effort. Some years before his death, when he was but a little past eighty, one of his intimates suggested to him that it was time for him to retire from the active management of his property and hire a general manager. "Whom can I hire?" he asked, and his friend was unable to offer a suggestion.

Viewed from one angle, the story of the rise of Miller from a penniless immigrant to the largest landholder in America is commonplace enough. The rules by which he achieved success are found in all the trite old copybook maxims about thrift, frugality, honesty, caution, etc. There was nothing thrilling, nothing adventurous, no miraculous stroke of luck involved in his acquisition of enormous wealth. Other men "struck it rich" in the early California days. Fortunes were made by the discovery of gold or silver. Henry Miller was one of the earliest settlers in the Golden State, treading close on the heels of the Argonauts of '49 but he never risked a penny nor wasted a day in the search for gold.

Half a century later California "struck oil," and a new crop of over-night millionaires sprung up. None of this "liquid gold" went to the enrichment of Henry Miller, even though lands he owned were in the heart of the first great California oil field. "Maybe there is oil," he said, when urged to drill in these Coalinga lands, "but I don't know the oil business, and I do know the cattle business, and I'll stick to that."

What could be more commonplace and unromantic than merely sticking to one's business?

Seen from another point of view, however, the story of the great estate and of its founder embraces the whole of the great American romance of the cattle ranch. The epic of beef, America's distinctive contribution to the catalogue of the world's economic romances, began and had its ending, almost, with the career of Henry Miller in California.

GRAZING HIS HERDS

There were great herds and great herdsmen before Miller. There are still "cattle kings" counting their steers by the thousands of head and pasturing them in what remains of the old free range. But the glamour and the greatness of the cowboy and the ranch house survive today chiefly in the "movies," and even in the days when the vaquero and the longhorn were at the height of their picturesque glory there was none other of whom it could be said, as it was said of Henry Miller, that he could drive a hundred thousand head of cattle from Mexico to Canada and feed and bed them every night on his own land.

That was never quite literally true, though it was the common saying in California. Asked about it, Henry Miller once said he had never owned more than 80,000 head of cattle at one time, and that while he could drive them all from Los Angeles to San Francisco (or about 700 miles) without stopping for the night on other than his own land, he did not own much California land either north or south of those limits. But throughout the course of the San Joaquin River, the richest and most fertile part of the State of California, the Miller and Lux ranches dominate the valley, and to a considerable extent control the waters of the river itself. And it was in this ownership of the land on which he pastured his steers, the land on which he grew their Winter rations of grain and hay, and the control of the water they needed to drink, that Henry Miller builded on a securer and more enduring foundation than the cattlemen of the free range further east. They may, some of them, have had more cattle under one brand at times than Miller ever owned, but the coming of the homesteader and the sheepmen drew ever-tightening boundaries around the range limits, from Texas to Montana, while the Miller properties and herds grew as he bought more and more land.

Not so picturesque, doubtless, this thrifty, business-like, far-seeing policy of Henry Miller's, as the wasteful, wide-ranging "drives" and the easy-going, devil-may-care methods of the "Cowboy Kings" of prairie tradition and the movies; quite commonplace, on the contrary —as commonplace as Henry Miller's own name, than which nothing could be more commonplace.

"Heinrich Mueller," which is what he was christened in Brackenheim, Wurttemberg, where he was born on July 21, 1828, is as nearly as possible the German equivalent of the English "John Smith," for commonplaces. And there was nothing to distinguish him from any other German immigrant boy; no outward sign of future greatness about the lad of 19 who landed at New York's Battery in 1847, looking for a job. He found one in the Washington Market, where he worked for the next three years as a butcher's helper. Then he went to California.

Where there were so many men hunting for gold, somebody must feed them, young Miller reasoned. He found work readily in a meat market in San Francisco. This was in 1850; the next year he had set up his own butcher shop, buying the native cattle, slaughtering them and selling the beef at profitable prices to the gold-seekers.

PARTNERSHIP WITH LUX

There were plenty of cattle in California. Long before American interests had replaced the Spanish, while California was still a part of Mexico, its exports of hides and tallow had constituted its chief business, as the reader of "Two Years Before the Mast" will remember. There was plenty of land in California, too, and between the tenuity of the claims under the old Spanish grants and the laxity of the public land laws of the United States, any of it could be had for a song, and most of it for nothing, if one went about it in the right way. So, in 1855, Henry Miller formed a partnership with another young German immigrant, Karl Luchs, whose name was Anglicised to Charles Lux, to acquire land and raise live stock.

Miller was the dominant influence in the partnership, in which he always maintained a controlling interest. When Lux died in 1888, the old firm of Miller and Lux was turned into a corporation, but this made no change in its methods, nor did its growth slacken. It was Miller who had been the driving force from the beginning. He remained the active, energetic head of the business until after his eighty-fifth birthday, keeping the reins of his far-flung enterprises as tightly in his own hands as he had in the fifties, when the venture was still young.

Miller and Lux bought cattle, pastured and fattened them, and sold them at a profit from the beginning. They bought sheep and made money. They bought hogs and made money. They put the money into more land and bought more live stock. Henry Miller, a year before his death, said they had once owned 100,000 sheep at one time. Once he bought all the sheep in the States of Nevada. The man whom he sent to make the purchase—with the broad order literally to buy every sheep in the State—came back to his employer with the report that he had bought all but 15,000, but he thought the price of these, $5 a head was too high.

"Take the next train back to Nevada and buy them," replied Miller.

HERO OF MANY STORIES

The story is characteristic of the thousands of anecdotes that any one who will take the trouble to listen can hear all up and down the San Joaquin Valley, over the line in Nevada and up into Oregon —wherever the Miller and Lux interests reach, and that is a long distance. Every anecdote tells the same story, the story of a man who knew his business, who did not regard any detail of it as too trifling to warrant his personal attention nor any phase of it too big to tackle. Henry Miller was never a speculator; he did not "plunge" in the sense of making reckless ventures, but he did not hesitate to spend money for live stock or for land on which to keep them. Thirty percent of all the Miller and Lux lands were kept in hay and grain; the rest served as pasture. Cattle, sheep and hogs were moved from north to south and back again with the seasons, but always on the Miller and Lux lands.

In the beginning much of the land was taken up under the homestead laws. Cowboys would file on homesteads under Miller's directions and deed their lands over to their employer when their titles were perfected. Foreseeing the need of permanent water supply long before irrigation was dreamed of or the great agricultural development of California anticipated, Henry Miller bought or homesteaded where he could on both banks of the San Joaquin River, thereby acquiring the riparian rights. Where he could not get these rights to his satisfaction, he acquired water rights in other ways; by "patenting" the maximum permissible number of "miners' inches," a process of securing to miners the perpetual right to divert a certain amount of water from a stream for mining purposes, but which served equally well to divert water for live stock. In recent years, as these water rights became valuable and the demand for water for irrigation grew, efforts were made to upset the Miller claims, but these were sustained by the Supreme Court.

The Miller and Lux ranches have been noted for sixty years as models of order and thrifty management. For forty years and more Henry Miller himself spent practically all his time traveling from ranch to ranch, inspecting them and making certain that everything was being run to suit him. Sometimes he traveled by railroad, but usually in a buggy behind a fast team, and even at the age of 85 he frequently drove from fifty to sixty miles in a day.

HIS WAY OF ORGANISING

Over every ranch Miller placed a general foreman, who had under him three sub-foremen, one for cattle, one for sheep and one for the farming operations. The Miller ranches are, indeed, more like the Eastern conception of big farms than like the traditional cattle ranch on which cultivated land is the exception. Every group of ranches in a given section had a general manager over it, and an important part of the organisation was a general superintendent for all of the sheep interests. But Henry Miller was the boss. Nobody in his employ ever had any illusions on that point.

At the headquarters of each ranch there was set aside a bedroom for the boss. He might arrive at any time, and his room had to be ready. If it were not in perfect order when he arrived, trouble started. There was even more serious trouble if he found evidence of neglect or carelessness in the domestic arrangements for the employes.

Kitchens, pantries and storehouses were inspected as carefully by the boss as were his fields and his herds and flocks. Once, on visiting a ranch, he was interested in a flock of newly hatched chickens. When he dropped in again, a few weeks later, he missed the chickens. "The rats got them," said the foreman. "Rats are a sign of decay," commented the boss, and a few months later that foreman was looking for a new job.

A man who "made good" in the heyday of the Miller and Lux business could have anything he wanted within reason, and the greatest of personal freedom in his work was given to him. To one man Henry Miller gave instructions somewhat like this:

"Buy anything you see that will make money; cattle or sheep or land."

Without further instructions and with never a word of criticism, this man spent nearly a million dollars, giving drafts against the Miller and Lux bank account, in the next few years. In one year he bought more than 200,000 sheep. During all this time he frequently went for months without seeing his employer. Once, as they were parting at Bakersfield, Miller said to him :

"If you see any good land, buy it. I've got a little spare money to invest."

"How much shall I spend?" asked his assistant.

"Oh, $300,000 or so" was the reply.

KNEW WHAT HE WANTED

Old timers who knew him describe Henry Miller as a man who knew just what he wanted, but was never in so much of a hurry to get it that he would pay more than it was worth. He never bargained nor haggled. He would name a lump sum that he would pay for a herd of cattle, for instance. That was his price. He got the herd at that price, or there was no sale. He was always willing to wait until things could be done properly, preferring thoroughness to speed.

Businesslike to the last degree in business matters, he was kind-hearted and generous in personal relations, and withal had a sense of humor that manifested itself in unusual ways.

He insisted upon his men being lodged and fed well, and those who became superannuated were pensioned. The cooks at every ranch had orders, moreover, to feed any hungry person who came along and ask no questions. One of his earliest orders, never revoked, was that any one needing meat was welcome to kill a calf or sheep on any ranch, so long as it was for his own use and not to be sold. Another general rule of the ranches was that any stranger arriving at the ranch at night should have stable and feed for his horse, lodging and food for himself, and neither be charged nor questioned.

Probably no man ever lived who was so often the victim of highwaymen as Henry Miller. He was known by sight to tens of thousands over a wide stretch of country. Men temporarily in need of funds frequently replenished their purses by sticking a six-gun into Henry Miller's face as he drove from one ranch to another and demanding his money or his life. He never resisted and never reported the little incidents; he used to say that most of the men who robbed him were personal acquaintances, and that if he ever reported one of them the next man would kill him, since he was sure to be identified. But he made it a rule not to carry any more money with him than he was willing to hand over to the robbers.

In the Pacheco Pass a Mexican whom Miller knew took $200 from him at the point of a revolver. The ranchman gave up the money willingly, but pointed out to the Mexican that he was a long way from home and would need a little for traveling expenses. Would the robber lend him $20? The bandit handed over a double eagle Three years later Miller met the Mexican in town, stopped him on the street, and handed him $20.

"I owe you that," he said. "I borrowed it from you three years ago!"

The Mexican demurred, but Miller insisted upon paying his "debt."

There was nothing easy-going, however, about Miller when it came to defending his rights to his ranch property. The object of innumerable attacks, both upon the title to his lands and the rights to the water of the San Joaquin River, the flow of which he substantially controlled, he had a lawyer under retainer in every town near one of his ranches. The court records of California are full of cases in which he figured, usually victoriously. On more than one occasion he defended with the aid of posses of armed cowboys his rights to the use of water from the river.

When he died, on Oct. 14, 1916, his estate consisted only of his house at 2,101 Laguna Street, San Francisco, and a small amount of money in the bank. Everything else he had given to his daughter and to her husband, J. Leroy Nickel, three years earlier. His son-in-law had for many years been intimately associated with him in business, and in sole charge of the San Francisco offices.

In the effort to collect the inheritance tax upon the whole of the Miller property, estimated then to have a net worth of at least $35,000,000, the United States Collector of Internal Revenue, Justus Wardell, seized the estate in 1918. There has been continuous litigation in the matter since then. Now the great property is to be broken up. Public opinion, as the representative of the property intimates, will not tolerate in America the passing on of great landed estates to those who have rendered no return to society in exchange for the privilege of holding them. In its day the Miller and Lux property rendered a service, as did the cattlemen of the free range, in supplying a growing population with meat at low cost. With the fencing of the free range and the increase in value through the influx of new settlers of such properties as the Miller estate, the day of cheap beef has passed, never to return in North America.

With the passing of the Miller and Lux ranches the romance of the cattle country of the old West departs to join "the glory that was Greece and the grandeur that was Rome." To find its parallel today, one must seek on the pampas of the Argentine; tomorrow, perhaps, a new generation of youngsters may find adventure and romance punching cattle on the steppes of Tartary, while the "Little Landers" build their bungalows where the last of the Cattle Barons once dreamed of building an empire.

Britain And America

(New York Times)

Many persons who have heard Dr. Francis L. Patton preach or lecture do not know that this former President of Princeton University and Princeton Theological Seminary is not an American. His interests in American affairs, his intimate knowledge of American policies, his wide circle of acquaintances in America seem unusual for one who was not born here. Yet he is a British subject, and is now living in the very house in which he was born seventy-eight years ago, in Warwick, Bermuda.

Sitting in the reception room of his beautiful home there, Carberry Hill, Dr. Patton talked a few weeks ago on a subject which he confessed was very near to his heart—the relations between the United States and England.

"The present British-American situation interests me more than anything," he said. "I have always been a British subject, but most of my life has been spent in America, and the two countries are very dear to me. I have lived fifty years of my professional life in America, and feel that I know the American people. If I did not know them I should be very dull, indeed, and if I did not love them, basely ungrateful. I do not keep my British and my American feelings in separate water-tight compartments, but let these streams of sentiment mingle in the river of my life.

"They tell me sometimes that Americans are insatiable in their thirst for gold. I incline to believe that this is true; but what splendid use they make of their acquisitions. Think of that great system of education all over the land, which, beginning with the public school and culminating in the university, they have built up out of generous appropriations of public funds. Think of the hospitals, libraries, museum, art galleries, pension funds, and funds for the endowment of research, which are the fruit of private fortunes, and then consider that brimming reservoir of wealth which can be tapped at any time to meet the unexpected demands of charitable uses. I cannot say that I am so sorry that Americans love money and have a genius for making it. In these respects they remind me very much of their British prototypes; and I believe their very likeness makes, in a great measure, for their divergence of opinion.

"I hear, sometimes, Americans say that the British are an avaricious people and that they have exploited the backward nations to serve their selfish ends. There may be some truth in this—and whether there is or is not, an unfortified denial would serve no useful purpose. But America has a continent to develop, and Britain is an island and, by the necessities of the case, had to be a colonising nation. She has been so long in the business and had such large experience that I may say, with little fear of contradiction, that she understands the art of governing colonies better than any nation in the world. Her widely distributed rule settle her policy respecting the size of her navy and the freedom of the seas. Colony, Protectorate, Commonwealth, Dominion, Empire—these are the labels which she attaches to her goods. She has done her share toward fulfilling the prophecy that the 'wilderness and solitary place shall be made glad and the desert shall rejoice and blossom as the rose.'

"I do not say that no injustice has ever been done in getting her flag to fly, but I do say without any hesitation that where it does fly it unfailingly stands as the symbol of impartial justice between man and man. Once within the bastion that marks the limit of her rule, the poor man is safe from oppression and the rich man is sure of punishment for crime.

"I thought that when the great war came, the bond between these two English-speaking nations would be closer than ever, and I cannot believe that it will be disrupted. International questions are more and more becoming matters of clear vision rather than deep feeling. We must not count too much on the domestic simile of mother and daughter.

There are a great many Americans who have no blood-relationship with England. Their ancestors—not to speak of later arrivals—came from Holland, or the Palatinate, or were Huguenots. Besides, the simile referred to may easily be made to carry the connotation of relative inferiority, and the time for that is past. The little one has become a thousand, and the small one a strong nation. Henceforth our international sympathies must depend less on our common descent and more on our common ideals.

"England and America have the highest type of civilisation, and fortunately they have the best resources. Wealth, men, education, power—these four factors of civilisation are centered in the two English-speaking nations. We must stand together if the world is to advance. This would be a very poor world in which to live if these two countries made war on each other."

Be sure to get pure candy. We suggest Candy and Chocolates from—

Olympic Games Special

JAPANESE, FILIPINOS WIN AT BASEBALL

Nipponese Defeat Asiatic Fleet, 1-0; Infantry Lose, 7-0

GAMES TODAY

Shanghai Nine To Play Filipinos; Marines vs. Japan

JAPAN and the Philippines both won in the first round of the baseball tournament of the Open International Games at Hongkew park yesterday afternoon, from the teams representing the American Asiatic fleet and the U. S. 15th Infantry, respectively. Thus they qualified for play in the semi-final games this afternoon.

The American Legation Guard from Peking is scheduled against Japan for the first game this afternoon at 2:30 p.m. and the Shanghai Baseball Club will meet the Philippines at 4:30 in the second match. The winning nines of this afternoon's games will play off in the final tomorrow for the Open International Games Championship.

Yesterday's games resulted as knowing baseball fans had them "doped." Japan and the Philippines are held by close followers of the Olympic series to represent the elite of baseball talent in Shanghai today. It was expected that they would qualify yesterday, and it is further felt that they will rank as favorites in today's play, in spite of the class of teams against which they are pitted.

JAPAN'S WIN CLEAN

Japan's win over the Navy yesterday was clean-cut and not open to dispute. Hayakawa reached first on a grounder which the Navy tried to work into a double play. Suzuki, the preceding batsman who had singled, was thrown out at second but Hayakawa was safe at first in spite of a sharp throw to double him. He took third on Numata's long line drive to left and scored on another clean hit over short.

The Navy men played a strong game. Merrill allowed but seven hits during the nine innings, and in only one inning were they bunched as high as two. But his team mates couldn't solve Utsumi's speedy delivery so runs were not forthcoming. Navy hit safely but twice. Only one sailor got as far as second on the route to scoring. That was O'Barr who clouted the first ball pitched in the first inning for a clean hit to right. Johnson sacrificed him to second where he died.

FILIPINOS SHOW WELL

The Philippines-Infantry game was fairly even until the eighth. A run was put over in the second on Jaropillo's hit, a wild throw to first, a further advance on an out and an error by Madge. The Infantry settled down to steadier baseball after that tally and it began to look like another 1-0 final score.

In the seventh the Army men got Madge on first on a single through short. He took second on a passed ball, and when Miller hit safely through short he made a desperate effort to tie the score for his team, only to be caught out at the plate by a beautifully sharp and accurate throw from Jaropillo in right field to Ciriaco. It was the Army's only opportunity. They previously had gotten but two men past first. And when Madge was caught out at the scoring place, the Tientsin team appeared to go to pieces.

Hetchison started the eighth by fanning Platon, but he walked the next two men. Ferrin let a ball by him, permitting one runner to tally, and the other came in on a single by Tingzon.

In the ninth the Filipinos began to hit Hetchison and he couldn't stop them. Two singles, a stolen base, and a muffed fly in left brought in two runs, and then Fernando banged out a homer over to the football field bringing the total runs for the inning up to four and the score for the game to 7-0.

HOW THEY PLAYED

First Inning

Japan—Kagayama, first man up was safe when Roberts dropped Gage's throw of his little grounder, but went out at second on a force-out off Utsumi's bounder, Fricke to Gage. Utsumi, safe at first, promptly stole and went to third on Miyaki's clean single through shortstop. Miyaki went to second unplayed. Mori, and Sugai, the next two batters, fanned. No runs, one hit.

Navy—O'Barr drove a fast clean hit through to center field, and took second on Johnson's bunt sacrifice.

East China And Filipinos Win Basketball Games

East China and the Philippines got off to a flying start in the open basketball championships yesterday when the two teams won the opening games of the series, defeating the Shanghai Foreigners and China Union, respectively. The Asiatic fleet team lost to Japan by default, the team not appearing on the field on account of the illness of one of the players. Instead of the third game on the schedule the substitutes on the Philippine team and the Japanese contenders met in an exhibition game which lasted two ten-minute halves and ended with the score at 15-all.

The East China-Shanghai Foreigners contest was by far the closest and most hotly contested yesterday, the Chinese winning by the narrow margin of five points. Score, 26 to 21. The Chinese played by far the cleaner game and hopelessly outclassed the Foreigners who were badly handicapped by the technical fouls called on them. The latter team also showed an utter lack of team work and very poor shooting. Tiau and Woo were the star performers in the game each caging the ball for three field goals. Li kicked in with two field goals while Liang and Mo contributed one each. Haskell, Verink, Duff and Irle each caged the ball for two field goals.

The second game of the afternoon was not quite as one-sided as the final score would indicate. The China Union team, composed mostly of players from St. John's University, lost the game by the almost one-sided score of 52-17 but they put up a good fight to the last and made their opponents extend themselves to earn the victory. The Filipinos played a very smooth game and this, together with their superior shooting, was chiefly responsible for their clean-cut victory. While playing a game that left much to be desired, the Union players showed classy dribbling at times and outclassed the Filipinos in this department of the game.

Bautista, the premier basket shooter for the Filipino team, caged the ball for no less than 15 field goals while Inigo came in with six field goals and Buenconsejo two.

Ling was the Union's best man and two field goals was his limit yesterday. The Chinese team, however, scored seven points on fouls.

Glauque and McCloy capably officiated in all of the three games.

TANAKA BEATEN BY ARAGON; NG BESTS OKUMURA

Defeat Of Local Crack By Filipino Is Surprise Of Far East Tourney

FARGAS IS AGAIN WINNER

Kitagawa And Asano Are Victors Over Ng And Wei In Doubles

BY W. S. A. POTT

SELDOM is there a large tournament without at least one upset, and it was young Aragon who provided the surprise yesterday by defeating Tanaka in the forenoon 7-5, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3. Tanaka showed signs of fatigue from his hard match against Ng the day before but this does not detract from credit due the young Filipino lad, who played spectacular tennis and deserved to win. Aragon has all the marks of a first class player, and if it is true that he is only eighteen years old, there is no telling to what heights of tennis fame he may rise. He is already a finished player, fine overhead with an excellent backhand which he can use off either foot and lots of speed. All he needs now is steadiness and experience.

FIRST SET

Tanaka began serving and took the first two games handily. Aragon was wild, but broke through and brought the games to 2-1 only to drop his service again. Tanaka broke through for the third time and led at 5-1 before Aragon began to find himself. On the seventh game after a long deuce game with Tanaka serving the Filipino broke through and followed this by capturing his own service for the first time in the set. Tanaka had let down, but underestimated his opponent.

Aragon again broke through on the ninth game with the help of the Japanese player's errors, bringing the score to 5-4. On the tenth game, Tanaka led at 40-15 with an easy chance at the net for the set. He threw away the next two points and lost the game after several deuces.

Encouraged by his success, Aragon played brilliantly, and took the odd game with two beautiful placements, one across the court and another down the side line. He then captured his own serve and the set at 7-5.

SECOND SET

Keeping up his whirlwind attack, Aragon broke through Tanaka's serve at once and led at 1-0 and 3-1. Here the Japanese asserted himself and took three straight games. This disconcerted the Filipino, and although he evened up matters with two pretty smashes and an ace, the Japanese player won his serve even after two double-faults and took the tenth game at love. Score 6-4.

THIRD SET

It looked as though Tanaka was going to beat his brilliant but erratic adversary, but Aragon steadied down again and the third and fourth sets brought out the best tennis of the match.

Tanaka took his serve, Aragon followed suit and then broke through on good overhead work. The Japanese promptly retaliated and brought the score to 2 all by clever strokes down the lines. Both players again dropped their services. At 3 all, Aragon took Tanaka's serve for the third time by good play.

Tanaka should have kept up the game of winning the other man's serve, for with 40-0 in his favor, he allowed Aragon to make it deuce and then win the game after several deuces had been called. The Japanese was still unable to win his serve and double-faulted on the final point, losing the set at 6-3.

FOURTH SET

With victory in sight the young Filipino played in a masterly fashion. Each player won his serve to 3 all when Aragon broke through on a series of beautiful aces. He was going too strong for Tanaka who could find no way to stop him.

The next two games fell to Aragon with the loss of only four points, and the set at 6-3.

NG BEATS OKUMURA

The Aragon-Tanaka match attracted the majority of the spectators, but there was a goodly number of Chinese on hand to see their favorite Ng dispose of little Okumura. This he did with comparative ease despite the loss of the third set.

Ng took matters easily at the start, but made sure of the first set at 6-4. He came up to the net frequently and bothered the Japanese player with his lobs. Okumura plays a back-court game exclusively, but Ng teased him up

OPEN SWIMMING SEES JAPANESE STAR IN 880 YARD

Haneda Shows Well In Half; Expected To Break Record Tonight

SIEMSSEN IS GOOD

Local Man Prominent In Heats; Wins 440; Blues Take Polo

THE first stage of the Open International Swimming Championships was concluded last evening, when the 50, 100, 440, 880 and 220 yards breast stroke races were swum off. The notable thing about the evening was that so few of those whose names were on the program actually took part in the races. Thus, there were only three heats instead of four in the 50 yards, two heats instead of three in the 100, one heat instead of three in the 440, one heat instead of three in the 220 yards breast stroke, and two instead of three in the half-mile.

Amoy the local men Siemssen was most prominent; he started off with third in his heat in the 50 yards, then second in his heat in the 100 yards, and ended up with a first in the sole heat of the 440, improving as the evening wore on. Fetherstonhaugh clocked good time in the second heat of the 50 yards which he won in 25 4/5s. Mears won his (the first) heat in 27 secs.

In the 100 yards Mears won his (the second) heat in 64 4/5, and a good race should be witnessed tonight in the final of this event, as the winner of the first heat, Ong Sing Guan clocked 64 1/5—just 3/5 of a second better than Mears.

In the half-mile the Japanese swimmers had matters all their own way, winning first and second places in both the two heats. Haneda is a really superior swimmer, and keeps up a modified crawl all the 880 yards; in fact, he did so all through the mile in the Far Eastern championships. Last night he registered 13m, 11 1/5s., and he is expected tonight to beat his Far Eastern record of Tuesday night, when he was timed at 27m, 26 4/5s. for the mile.

At the conclusion of the swimming events there were exhibitions of fancy diving and water polo.

The latter event was in the nature of a scratch game between members of the Rowing Club, assisted by three players from the International Swimming Club; Messrs. C. J. Cooke and the brothers Encarnacao.

Mr. Percy Fowler refereed, the sides being captained, Whites by H. D. Rodger and Blues by R. A. Berthet. The result was a victory for the Blues who scored four goals per Berthet (2), Brodie (1) and Cooke (1), as against two goals netted by MacCabe for Whites.

Mr. L. Bertes was custodian for the Whites, and this will probably be his last water polo game here for some time, as he leaves very shortly for Sunny Italy, and the good wishes of all swimmers go with him.

The following are the results in detail:

50 YARDS

Heat 1 1.—E. C. Mears.
2.—E. A. Brodie.
3.—E. Siemssen.
Time—27 sec.
Heat 2 1.—E. V. Fetherstonhaugh
2.—Ong Sing Guan.
Time—25 4/5 secs.
Heat 3 1.—S. Abreo.

TADURAN LEADS IN DECATHLON; CHU EN TE THIRD; BOY SCOUTS AND GIRL GUIDES IN DEMONSTRATION; OPEN TRACK AND FIELD CHAMPIONSHIPS ON TODAY

First Day Of All Around Competition Sees Close Fight For Honor; Sato Is Hot After Taduran With Chu Near

JUAN K. Taduran of the Philippines garnered the largest number of points in the first half of the Decathlon held at Hongkew Park yesterday. His marks in the first event of the five gave him a commanding lead which was difficult for the other competitors to overtake. He made 392 points. Sato, Japan's best bet, was but two points behind.

Chu En-te, China's lone hope in the event, was third with 375 points. Chu's team mate, Ling Ngiong Sieu, withdrew from the competition in the fifth event, the 440 yards dash, on account of an injured foot.

Taduran starred in the high jump, clearing the bar at 5 feet 5 and three quarters and the 100 and 440 yards. He was last in the broad-jump, which was taken by Sato with a leap of 21 feet and two inches. Taduran was last in the shot put, which went to his pal Alo. Alo threw 34' 11⅜".

Sato was second in the 100 yards and tied for second place with Chu in the high jump. In the 440, he ranked third and in the shot put, fourth. Chu En-te's performance yesterday was by no means brilliant. He only managed three seconds in the broad jump, shot put and high jump, tied for third place in the 100 yards and was last but one in the 440, showing poorly in both track events.

Suporters of the Chinese contestant, however, believe that he is still in the race and may yet retain his crown in the Far East in today's second half of the Decathlon, consisting of the 220 hurdles, pole vault, discus throw, hop-step-jump and the mile.

Chu should win all the last named three events, while Taduran, according to his record at the previous meet, is about 16 feet behind Chu in the discus, two feet behind in the hop-step-jump and 18" seconds slower in the mile. The latter, however, should easily snatch the hurdles and beat the title holder in pole vault.

Sato is the dark horse. And in view of the performance of his confreres in the long distance during the present meet, it is likely that he will give Chu all his money's worth. Alo was a good and close fourth for Chu yesterday, but it is said he is not considered such a formidable rival for Chu because of the Filipino's inability to run the mile.

Incidentally Alo will try for a Far Eastern record in the pole vault today. He holds the present mark of 11 feet, 6 inches and on Tuesday barely missed making 12 feet. While Alo is a great athlete, he has little chance of winning the decathlon and it appears that Coach Thomas has sent the man into the competition so that he may have another crack at the pole vault. And Chinese and Japanese athletes are rooting for him to break it today.

OVER 400 ENTERED IN OPEN CONTESTS STARTING TODAY

THE open international track and field meet starts this afternoon with over 400 entered and the Philippine Islands booked to repeat its victory in the Far Eastern championships. Coach Thomas is starting 26 men after the title but the Filipinos will have a stiffer row to hoe as in addition to Japanese and Chinese entrants, they must fight it out with the Shanghai Harriers Club, Harbin Sporting Club, U. S. Asiatic Fleet and Shanghai Korean Athletic Association and representatives of other organisations.

The Harriers Club and Asiatic Fleet men will be heard from while it is expected that members of the local Police Department will show well in the weight events.

There are two other attractions for this afternoon inside the stadium. The 25-mile marathon starts in front of the grandstand, the runners to run two laps around the track and then leave by the Kiangwan Road gate for the long grind to Woosung. Japanese will fight for honors among themselves as no other countries have entered though the event carries with it a Far Eastern Olympic championship.

The men will run through Dixwell Road, Urga Road, Dent Road, Seward Road and Yangtszepoo Road to Woosung, returning by the same route.

CAGE BALL GAME

The second extra feature billed today is the cage ball game between the deckhands and engine room force of the U. S. S. Huron. Each side is to have 100 men and each side will have several hundred supporters. The cage ball game will probably not be any picnic, either.

Some great competition is billed for this afternoon. Seven heats are scheduled in the sprints and Catalon, Castillon and Kaga must step high and handsome to come through. Gutierrez, Goldman, Seredkin, Marshall and Scott are local men entered with Hughes, Heard, Brown and Eason running for the Navy, and the Harbin Sporting Club entering three men.

Okazaki should go a 4:30 mile today for he will be pressed, and the quarter should be a hummer. The Philippines will be represented by Danao, Malino and Lopez; Reneman is the best bet of the Harriers Club. The Navy has Brown, Hunter, Charbonean, Smiley and Burns entered and the Harbin Club is counting on Leimanshtein and Davidduk. Shimamura, Sumikawa and Sawada will run for Japan.

Lawrie Smith will run the low hurdles with Dixon, Kattel, Bucoy and Abierra running for the Philippines and Kato entered for Japan. The high hurdles will bring out Fernandez, Amad, Suela, and Miguel of the Philippines; Watanabe, the Japanese crack; da Silva, Lynn, Gutierrez of Shanghai and Ermakoff of Harbin.

O'TOOLE IN DISCUS

Inspector J. O'Toole of the Wayside Police Station will try to stage a comeback in the discus. Some years ago he collected several trunkfuls of medals and ribbons and has been working hard for the event. Verink and Clack, who were officials at the Thanksgiving Day football game here a couple of years ago, are entered in the event along with Eason and Austin of the Asiatic Fleet, Ermakoff of the Harbin Sporting Club, W. B. Ready and the Chinese, Japanese and Filipino best.

Remarkable Exhibition Of Scout Work Given By Boys From 10 Cities And 38 Schools; Girls In Calesthenic Drill

By ELSIE McCORMICK

OUR previous observation of the Boy Scouts, as seen from the standpoint of New York and San Francisco, showed a group of bare-kneed youngsters who learned woodcraft in the park and then came home to practice it in the wilds of a three-room apartment.

We understood in a vague way that they were celebrated for being able to find their way home from the movies by observing the moss on the telegraph poles that their ability to make a camp-fire was a great asset in a house kept warm by spurts of hot water and cold air from radiators; that their talents for tying knots had a definite relation to the stringiness of the lace curtains, and that their lessons in archery were bitterly rued by every cat within target range.

We understood also that the staffs they carried were employed chiefly to make them fall downstairs and that one of the Scouts' main missions in life was to block up the aisles just as the 150 pound lady who was representing Starving Armenia came out to do a tableau in the Drive for the United Countries of Europe, Asia and Way Stations.

BUT NOT NOW

That's how we used to feel about it. But we hadn't yet seen the demonstration which 1,200 scouts offered at Hongkew Park yesterday afternoon in the presence of an audience as interested if not as noisy as it was when various Far Eastern representatives were trying to discover which could run fastest at the sound of a pistol shot. If the Chinese and Japanese can get away from trouble as fast as they can from the starting shot, nobody need concern himself about war clouds in Asia.

However, Boy Scouts representing 38 schools and ten cities marched on to the track oval at 2:30 yesterday afternoon, a fife and drum corps loudly advising them to pack up their troubles in their old kit bag and display their molars in exultation. Then the various troops, each one tagged by its banner, camped on the grass about the edges of the oval and awaited their turn to demonstrate.

REGULAR CIRCUS

In a few minutes so many things were going on at once that we were kept as busy as a cat in a codfish cannery. One troop was gyrating through the movements of an ancient Chinese spear dance, another was fencing with rods, and third was going through a performance which we took at first to be shadow boxing, but which we later decided was an imitation of a lady interpretive dancer picking tacks off the stage to represent violets. Anyway, whatever it was, it was graceful and done with remarkable uniformity.

In the meantime, one set of Girl Guides, arrayed in gray uniforms with red hair-ribbons, was marching, doing calesthenics, and putting up tents; while another group, dressed in blue, performed an Indian dance, followed by a sailor's hornpipe. There are three troops of Girl Guides in the province, two having been organised in Shanghai and one at Nanking. The only time we ever encountered them before was on Monday when we were looking for the football match, but evidently it was off-day for guiding, especially if the guidee's Chinese is too subtle to put into words.

After the last atmospheric enemy had been speared by a shining weapon with a tuft of red hair at its top, a Scout troop from Wusih took the center of the field and did a really remarkable bit of slashing and whirling with long-bladed, scimitar-like knives. Though one expected each scout to give himself or his neighbor an unscheduled haircut, the steel was handled with such perfect adroitness that no casualties resulted.

It is fortunate, however, that this form of scoutcraft has not

SAYS "BUGS"

RUBBER JAWSTRAP IS NOTHING NEW

Roughtown Champ Once Battled Entire Gutta Percha Opponent

BY 'BUGS' BAER

Now they're chanting about Ted Lewis wearing an Ostermoor mattress in his store teeth. Ted and Jack Britton have battled twenty times. But they're not through yet as the suburban edition of the Scriptures states that man's allotment on this earth is threescore and ten.

Having large and acclimated experience in biting off nutritious left jabs and counting the calories in right hooks, Ted decided to battle Jack with a make-up. So he went into his last fight equipped F. O. B. with sock absorbers, pneumatic toupee and inflated jowls. The idea being that all punches would roll off his complexion like an "H" in the House of Commons.

Ted was accessoried up like a flivver with spare parts. His only chance of being hurt was if his Traveler's Insurance started backfiring on him. But Britton had a frolic with Ted in comparison to the matinee Gink Fowler put on with Zig Waffle.

All of Gink's matches were made by mail through the Roughtown Matrimonial Bureau. They used to get a Maine clamdigger on the hook, put the soothing syrup on him and the silkworms would start to work. The Maine guy would come out to Roughtown figuring on marrying a lazy widow, spangled with millions and so wealthy that she wore hairpins all the year round. When the oystercracker got out to Roughtown he would discover that the lazy dowager was Gink Folwer. They'd take the shrimp trapper's rake and hoe away from him and put him in the ring with Gink, who would promptly switch around the green, pink and purple pins on his battlemaps and knock Mr. Clamdigger for a trip around the world with Burton Holmes.

This scheme of getting opponents for Gink worked very healthy until Zig Waffle got up the missing line to the bobtailed limerick and enclosed a cancelled stamp for reply. Zig figured on becoming the husband of one of Roughtown's leading waitresses. But when he got there he saw that he would have to take his drink out of the oil can. Zig had been bitten by a fox in his infancy and knew that two and two made four in any league. His regular job was India Rubber Man in Burnem and Bawlem's Circus.

Until Zig climbed into the ring, Gink and his playmates thought the fight was already filed away in the imperishable archives of Roughtown. But when Gink landed a spank on Zig's chest, the blow came back and bounced off Gink's jaw. It sounded like a pumpkin being punished with a bed slat. Zig had no defence. You could hit him with anything. But it always came back with accrued, compound and enthusiastic interest. Fighting was sugar in Zig's coffee.

The more the bird soaked him, the more he liked the nourishment. Gink soon discovered that he was battling an India Rubber Man and that he was getting a receipt for every punch. They'd have been fighting yet, if Gink hadn't doped the rebus. He stopped the fight, put non-skid chains on his knuckles and ran Zig up into a 20,000 mileage record. The fight lasted two hours, but the climax justified the accusation. The Roughtown Board of Graft impeached Gink for annoying the overseers of whisker plantations, but Gink showed that science could overcome brute strength provided you put in enough raisins and yeast cakes.

He was still champion.

Manila Interested In Olympic Games; Bulletin Board Up

Manila is all excited about the Filipino athletes who are performing so well in Shanghai at the Far Eastern and open games and according to cables received by the delegation here, bulletin boards have been placed in several places down town and the results are also shown on a screen at night in the Plaza Goiti.

Manila newspapers are represented at the games by Antonio H. Escoda, former sporting editor of the Manila Daily Bulletin and the Philippines Herald. Escoda flashes the results of each game or race and follows later with extended stories by wire.

been introduced into America. One can imagine a scout standing between the wall bed and the collapsible bureau in an apartment house menage, severing the chandelier with one stroke and shortening mother's best transformation with the next. We don't know just where these youths practiced when they first learned the trick, but we'll wager one Underwood ribbon, slightly used, that the sport was not popular with bystanders.

DOWN WENT THE SCRIBE

In the meantime, a phonograph in the middle of the field played everything from grand opera to Dixie, finally scratching out the Star Spangled Banner for which we didn't stand as we were afraid we wouldn't have our chair when we sat down again. Incidentally, the chair we had Wednesday was occupied yesterday by a dignified representative of a very, very dignified morning contemporary and it collapsed like a Shanghai romance after the wife arrives from America.

However, after the Scouts had scouted about a bit further, another troop gave an exhibition of speed in putting up and demolishing a canvas dwelling. In less time than it takes to call the name of a station on a Russian railroad line, the youths had hammered the stakes, jerked at the ropes, and hauled the tents upright. During a similar interval they succeeded in pulling them down again and rolling them into bundles not much larger than the pile of chits we received yesterday.

All of which gives us an idea. If harried house-hunters would only take a few lessons from the Boy Scouts, they could unfold their tents in the Public Gardens and then be prepared to roll them up again in case they sighted a Sikh policeman who looked as if he were about to advise them to move on.

The Boy Scouts later gave a demonstration of bandaging and stretcher-bearing, after which a group of thirty boys dressed in the colors of the Chinese flag, circled the field and serpentined through many variegated movements. The first five wore the red that represents China Proper, the next group the yellow that stands for Manchuria, the third, the blue that symbolises Mongolia, the fourth, the white that stands for the snows of Thibet; and the fifth, the black that indicates Chinese Turkestan. The loud cheering greeted the living flag seemed to contradict the impression that China has no patriotism.

HISTORY OF MOVEMENT

The Chinese Boy Scouts were first organised ten years ago at the Hua Tung School on Elgin Road. Though begun with the assistance of a foreigner, the movement has been carried on entirely under Chinese management. There are at present over 7,500 members in Kiangsu Province alone, troops having been organised in thirty-six hsien. The Boy Scouts are pledged to three purposes—to strengthen their bodies, cultivate high moral aims, and engage as far as possible in social service. They have performed a great mission in attempting to improve street conditions in their towns and villages, both by giving hints on sanitation and by actually doing street-cleaning themselves, in order to call the matter to public attention. When one considers Chinese contempt for manual labor and the broad social line which separates coolie from scholar, the significance of this form of service may be fully appreciated.

The Scouts have also proved extremely valuable as auxiliary police—their omnipresence at the Far Eastern Olympics illustrating their usefulness and ability in controlling crowds. A thin khaki line of Scouts, none of them more than five feet tall, yesterday succeeded in holding back a swarming mass of coolies separated from the field only by a battered bamboo fence. Like their brothers in Western countries, Chinese Boy Scouts are pledged to do one good turn a day, but those who observed their work during the Far Eastern Olympic will maintain that they are at least a year ahead on their requirements.

Cambridge Shows Well Against Team From Australia

(Reuter's Service)

London, June 1.—The Australians opened a match at Cambridge today against the University. The latter batted first, and were dismissed for 220. The principle feature of the innings was the brilliant and confident batting of H. Ashton, whose score of 107 included 19 fours. He had the distinction of making the first century against the Australians in the present tour. Unfortunately a fast ball from McDonald hit and dislocated a finger. He retired hurt and is unlikely to take any further part in the match.

The Australians scored 107 for three wickets before close of play. The Cambridge fielding was superb.

Fargas-Tanaka Tennis Game Today Will Draw Crowd

close on numerous occasions and fed him with lobs.

The Chinese ran off the second set 6-0, and then let down. Hanging on is Okumura's strong point and he was rewarded by winning the third set 6-2. He led in the fourth set 5-3, but at this point Ng rallied and took the next three games in short order and the match at 6-4, 6-0, 2-6, 7-5.

FARGAS AGAIN WINS

The afternoon's tennis was a disappointment. Fargas disposed of Tyau without having to extend himself at 6-2, 6-1, 6-3. This was anticipated, but it was hoped that the double between the Chinese and Japanese would bring out better tennis than it did. Ng was not at his best and the strenuous play of the past few days has done him up physically. His partner, Wei was not strong enough to give him any effective help, and was frequently out of position. The Japanese pair showed up better than they have on any previous occasion, the improvement in overhead work being particularly noticeable.

The Japanese took the first two sets 6-3, 6-0. In the third set the Hongkong players raised their supporters' hopes by leading at 3-0 but Kitagawa and Asano immediately proceeded to even things up and then take the set and match in straight sets, 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

SUMMARY OF PLAY

Aragon (P.I.) beat Tanaka (Japan) 7-5, 4-6, 6-3, 6-3.

Ng (China) beat Okumura (Japan) 6-4, 6-0, 2-6, 7-5.

Fargas (P.I.) beat Tyau (China) 6-2, 6-1, 6-3.

Kitagawa and Asano (Japan) beat Ng and Wei (China) 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

MATCHES FOR TODAY

Ng has decided to default both his singles match with Aragon and the doubles match against Suarez and Fargas, so that there will not be any tennis in the morning.

In the afternoon, the singles between Tanaka and Fargas on the main court at three o'clock should be a battle royal. Both of these men beat S. K. Ng in four sets, and while Tanaka received a set-back yesterday at the hands of the hard-hitting Aragon, he will be out to avenge himself by trying to defeat the Philippine No. 1 singles player. Tyau will play Okumura on the second court and this should be a fairly close match.

At 4:30 Messrs. Mansel-Smith and Pott will play a practice game against Kitagawa and Asano at the request of the Selection Committee for the Interport Tournament.

TING, TING, TING!

I stood upon the pitching hill,
And mowed the batters down at will—
I threw the shoots and whizzing curves,
And ruined all the sluggers' nerves—
I made Babe Ruth a comic thing—
And then—the alarm-clock had to ring!

I smashed a triple past first base,
Next time a double—self-same place—
They sent big Alexander in—
He shot a high one, near my chin—
I drove it for the right-field wall—
Just then—I heard the alarm clock's call!

I drew the gloves on. Facing me
Jack Dempsey stood. His trembling knee
Was shimmying before the fight—
Full well he knew my deadly right!
I crossed him with a toppling swing—
And then—oh blazes; Ting, ting, ting!

I picked a long shot at the track,
And placed thereon my golden stack—
Two hundred thousand, ready cash—
Fifteen to one—a half-mile dash!
He flashed home past the yelling throng—
And then—the clock went bing, bong, bong!

He looks as though he had a premonition of what the Japanese had in store for him and Ng yesterday.

American Golfers Arrive In England

London, June 1.—Eleven American professional golfers have arrived to compete in the Open Championship.

Five American ladies were defeated in the Ladies' Golf Championship at Turnberry today, thus completing the elimination of all the eleven American competitors.

Sports Correspondence

Sporting Editor, THE CHINA PRESS

Sir: The writer would be grateful if you would decide the following:

A and B make a wager on the morning of the baseball game between the Filipinos and the Japanese teams on the day's game with the feeling or the idea that there was to be but one game.

Now A thinks that he won the bet as the Japanese took the first game. B feels that as the doubleheader was played without previous notice, wagers should stand until the deciding game is played.

The question to decide is A's viewpoint a sporting or technical one?

Yours truly,
H. E.

H. E. Far be it from us to decide whether A's viewpoint is sporting or technical. But we have been asked to decide several wagers on the same basis, made by men who believed that but one game was to be played between Japan and the Philippines.

Our answer has been—Why not let the bet be decided by Saturday's game. It is the same bet and a pretty even proposition at that.

Common Golfing Faults

Balance The Secret Of Success

BY ABE MITCHELL

It is still unfortunately true of golf that most players do not take to the game until, as they tell you, they have finished with cricket and football. The result is that when they go on to the tee for the first time they are lacking in the daring of youth and if not stiff their muscles have become fixed. It is either this or they suffer from an excessive exuberance of swing and want to knock the cover off the ball. Better the latter than the former, for it is far easier to restrict a swing than to create one. But the most common fault is stiffness which is not due to any inelasticity of the muscles but to timidity. It seems as if the player is afraid to strike in case he should miss the ball.

The professional coach has to try all sorts of experiments to get rid of this stiffness. One of the best ways is to insist on the beginner learning to waggle. It may seem waste of time to swing the club backwards and forwards over the ball, but I assure you it is not. Every professional does it because he feels that it is a help in bringing the wrists into play. Besides it also takes some of the rigidity out of the body. Keep on doing it and you will find that a curious lightness comes into the swing and also that the shoulders turn of their own accord and in the natural way. And the shoulders must turn if the shot is going to be a good one.

STIFFNESS STANCE

When a player takes up a stance for the first time he usually stands very upright with the knees stiff and the hands held high. In such a case I always tell my pupils to try and imagine that they are just about to sit down. The effect of this is that they not only bend the knees and back but that they lower the hands. To stand upright with the hands held high means that a great deal of power is lost. On the other hand if you bend down to the shot you are much less liable to lose your balance. And balance I am sure is one of the great secrets of golf.

The upright stance too is often responsible for that fatal sway of the body. I know that there are some first class golfers who do sway, but they have the knack to correct any faults that rise by a light pause at the top of the swing, and unless you happen to have this knack the sway, as I have said, is fatal. By bending the knees I think you will find that the inclination to take the body back with the club is very largely removed. Another thing which will help to correct this error is to keep the weight back on the heels. So far as the handicap player is concerned most driving faults arise through the loss of balance and this defect is most likely to occur at the top, or near the top, of the swing.

It is probably true as Duncan has said that the follow through is not very important, but I am sure that the champion would not give any pupil of his this impression. What, of course, he meant was that the behavior of the club after the ball has been struck properly did not affect the shot one way or the other. I think that is right, but in the case of the beginner it is imperative that he should learn to take the club right through or there will be a danger of his stopping, or checking, the club before reaching the ball. Of course, the club should be swinging its fastest and the last ounce of power should be exerted at the moment of impact. Incidentally this, I suppose, is the true definition of perfect timing.

SMOTHER CAUSE AND CURE

The other day a player sought my advice for what he described as a fit of topping. I took him out on to the tee and watched him play a few shots and at once saw that he was smothering the ball rather than hitting it on the top. If ever you should be attacked in this way stop the club at the top of the swing and note the position of the hands. In all probability you will find that the left elbow is pushed outwards and that the left wrist is not underneath the club.

Now, what is the effect of this? You are not in a position to see but instead of the club at the top being parallel with a line drawn across the shoulders, it is pointing away from your back. At the same time the face of the club is shut. You have probably read a good deal lately about the shut and open face. Well, here you have the club shut and in my opinion it is always a danger. By those who play with the shut face it is intended that the club should be more or less turned over at the impact with the object of securing a low trajectory and also to impart that spin to the ball which will make it run on bouncing. But there is a very real danger of turning the club too much over and smothering the ball. This was actually what my distressed pupil was doing. It was significant that he at once began to get the ball up when he made certain of keeping the left wrist underneath the shaft of the club.

WRISTS ARE IMPORTANT

The golf stroke is not a blow with the arms as many make it. Of course the forearms come largely into play in the use of irons, but right through the games the wrists must be got to work. If only the arms are used you get little or no help from the muscles of the back and you will know that some say that I attain my length from the use of my back. Whether this is so I cannot say but when I am driving well I can always feel my back going into the shot. But if you make the stroke with the arms you are handicapped in bringing any other muscles into play and in this way you not only lose power but run the risk of hitting yourself off your balance.

I think too that you will note that the player who depends on his arms finds the utmost difficulty in getting the ball to rise quickly even with a mashie. In effect he is pushing the ball with a forearm movement and struck in that way it is almost impossible for it to come as quickly as is desired. In all probability the face of the club is turned over. It is a golden rule to let the club lie on its natural face and to allow it to give the trajectory which it was made to give.

Going To The Races 20th Century Style

New York business men who wish to see the Kentucky Derby can do so this year without losing much time. The Kentucky Jockey Club has just arranged for a special train of eight private cars to leave the Pennsylvania Station at 2 o'clock on Friday, May 16, scheduled to reach Louisville at 8 o'clock on Saturday and return that night, reaching New York on Sunday afternoon. Five cars have already been reserved, H. P. Whitney taking one, Lawrence Waterbury and J. L. Replogle another, J. S. Cosden another, H. F. Sinclair another and Mrs. Wilfred Viau another. Mrs. Viau's jockey, Clarence Kummer, will ride Trysten for Mr. Whitney.

School For Card Players

AUCTION BRIDGE

Question—Plying progressive auction, if all foud pass without a bid, is the deal lost, or are four hands to be played rtgardless of the deal on which no one could make a bid?.—C.H.C.

Answer—The rule is that there shall be four hands layed. As a hand cannot be played if no one makes a bid, the rule is that the deal passes to the left and four hands are dealt and played. In duplicate games, if there is no bid at the first table at which the hand is dealt the deal is void and the cards art dealt again.

Question—We follow the rule to tke the partner out of a no-trumper then we have five cards of any suit and nocard above a queen. But suppose the hand has no suit of five cards, what should be done to warn the no-trumper?—(Mrs.) G.

Answer—In that case, four trumps being worth little or nothing, the no-trumper must be left to its fate. Five trumps are good for two tricks, and the bid incrtases the contract only one trick. Four tramps would increase the contract without any compensating promise of trump tricks.

Question—The dealer holds acejack-ten at the top of six spades, ace of clubs alone, ace and small in hearts, ace and three smll in diamonds. What is the bid?—E.L.M.

Answer—A spade. Although there art four aces in the hand, they are all weak suits at no-trump and the spade is the safe call. If the partner denies spades with a suit, then it may be well to consider the shift to no-trumps. The score for 100 aces is not as important as the game.

Question—We are told that there is nothing reprehensiblt in leading out of the wrong hand when there is no way to get that hand into the lead legitimately, and that if the opponents do not detect the error it is just the same as if they did not notice a discard or count the trumps.—M.G.M.

Answer—A player who would do this deliberately, hoping to get away with it, would be looked upon as about on a par with one who revoked on purpose, if it fere done in any good card club.

POKER

Question—Playing with the joker running wild, A shows joker, ace, king, queen, eight of clubs. B holds ace, king, queen, ten, nine of diamonds. Can A call his hand ace-ace high?—P. L.H.

Answer—Yes. The joker must be called aduplicate of some card in the pack, and the fact that the holder of the joker has that duplicate does not matter. Ace-ace high is a better flush than ace-king high.

VINGT-ET-UN

Question—Is it right to count jacks 2, queens 3 and kings 4 in this game, or are all the picture cards alike in values, 10 points? —A.L.S.

Answer—All are worth 10 points.

SMUDGE

Question—A is two in the hole when he bids four and makes it. B btes he cannot claim the game, as he was in the hole when he made the smudge. Who wins? —G.L.N.

Answer—B is correct. Four must be bid and made when the bidder has a clean score, or some points up.

JAPANESE, FILIPINOS WIN AT BASEBALL

Merrill fanned, and Gage went out Hayakawa to Tatsuma, leaving O'Barr at second. No runs, one hit.

Second Inning

Japan—Tatsuma waited Merrill out and got a pass. Suzuki attempted a sacrifice but pop-flied to Merrill. Hayakawa grounded one to Fricke, who threw Tatsuma out at second, Hayakawa getting on at first after a close decision on the try at a double play. Numata singled to left field, a stiff line drive, and Hayakawa went to third. Numata slipped to second on the throw in to Scymanski. Kagayama was hit by one of Merrill's fast ones and the bases were filled. Utsumi singled over short, scoring Hayakawa. Numata tried also to come in but a beautiful throw-in, Weaver to Horner, caught him at the plate for the third out. One run, two hits.

Navy—Weaver fanned and Scymanski went out, Hayakawa to Tatsuma. Roberts rolled a little one to Utsumi for an easy out at first. No runs, no hits.

Third Inning

Japan—Miyaki got a life when Gage let his easy grounder slip through his hands into left field. The ball looked so easy that Gage was over confident. Mori sacrificed him to second. Sugai drove a clean hit through first and second advancing Miyaki to third. Tatsuma came up and Japan attempted a squeeze. Miyaki raced in for the plate, but Tatsuma failed to meet the ball and Horner tagged the runner out yards. Tatsuma fanned. No runs, one hit.

Navy—Fricke fouled a dozen or more times, then walked. Horner bunted to Utsumi who threw Fricke out at second, Horner getting first on fielder's choice. O'Barr went out on a little fly to Utsumi. Johnson walked, forcing Horner to second ahead of him. Merrill flied out to Numata for the third out. No runs, no hits.

Fourth Inning

Japan—Suzuki hit to Fricke, who made a dive for the ball but it was too far to reach. He fell all over himself and Suzuki gained first. Hayakawa tried a bunt but pop flied out to Scymanski. Suzuki stole second. Numata flied to center, Kagayama went out, Fricke to Roberts, retiring the side with Suzuki left on second. No runs, one hit.

Navy—Gage went out on a very close play of his grounder, Miyaki to Tatsuma. Weaver flied out to center. Scymanski struck out but the last strike was high and wide and Mori let it past. Scymanski was safe at first, but he died there when Roberts went out Utsumi to Tatsuma on an easy grounder. No runs, no hits.

Fifth Inning

Japan—The side went out one, two, three. Utsumi was thrown out at first by Gage; Miyaki fanned and Merrill picked up Mori's roller and beat him to first with the ball. No runs, no hits.

Navy—Fricke foul flied to Mori. Horner drove a fast one to Hayakawa who made a nice stop and peg to first for the second out. O'Barr went out Miyaki to Tatsuma on an easy grounder. No runs, no hits.

Sixth Inning

Japan—Sugai was thrown out by Merrill and Tatsuma by Scymanski. Suzuki flied to Fricke. No runs, no hits.

Navy—Johnson fanned and Merrill went out pitcher to first. Gage drove a mean one to Miyaki who scooped it up for a nice stop and threw him out at first on a close decision. No runs, no hits.

Seventh Inning

Japan—Hayakawa struck out. Numata singled to left and took second on Kagayama's out Gage to Roberts. Utsumi was thrown out by Merrill, who got his sixth assist on the play. No runs, one hit.

Navy—Utsumi threw Weaver out. Scymanski fanned and Roberts foul flied out to Suzuki. No runs, no hits.

Eighth Inning

Japan—Miyaki ran hard on his grounder to Gage but was thrown out to Roberts. Mori and Sugai, the next two up fanned. No runs, no hits.

Navy—Fricke, for the second time foul flied out to Mori. Horner flied out to Sugai, and O'Barr was out to Tatsuma unassisted. No runs, no hits.

Ninth Inning

Navy—Johnson drove one straight for the initial sack. The ball struck the bag and bounced off into the crowd. It was a safety. He went out immediately however when Merrill grounded to Utsumi, and the latter threw to second for a force. Merrill went to second on Gage's out Miyaki to Tatsuma, but the game was ended when Weaver grounded to Hayakawa for an out at first. No runs, one hit.

BOXING IN LONDON TOWN IS DOWN FOR THE COUNT

Slump Is Laid To Successive Defeats Of British Champions

London, May 1.—British fight promoters see the bottom falling out of the boxing game, but remain powerless to revive it. The manly art in London is down for the count and it looks like it is out for a long time.

The only event now in prospect is a battle between Tommy Burns and Joe Beckett. The men have met twice. Beckett got the decision the first time in Albert Hall. Burns was victorious the second time in the corridor of a hotel in Leeds. Since both have been begging for engagements, they quickly agreed to fight ten two-minute rounds some time in May. Short rounds were agreed upon because Tommy admits he is too old and febble to go the regular distance, but he doesn't consider that will prevent him from defeating Beckett.

Joe, who is still heavyweight champion of Great Britain, is glad to have a chance to enter the ring, for, while he has somewhat recovered his senses from Moran's Mary Ann, he has never recovered his popularity.

The only hope now is that Jack Dempsey will stop off here and give us a thrill. The British plan of welcoming international fights has proved fatal to business. Patrons have always fallen back on Jimmy Wilde, but haven't been able to do that since Pete Herman visited here without his title. Johnny Basham was heralded as the immediate welterweight champion until Lewis knocked him out in the seventeenth round, but since Lewis went to America and was beaten by Britton, Basham has remained in seclusion.

Bombardier Wells is always cheered when he enters the ring, but the public could not be induced to back him against Battling Levinsky, so the Battler had to content himself with looking over the battlefields and then going home.

Carpentier is touring and Moran is enjoying the sunshine in the south of France, and the outlook generally for the boxing game here is indeed dark. London wants a Moran-Carpentier fight before it will take the Dempsey-Carpentier matter seriously, but the Frenchman is dodging the Pittsburgher. They are not interested in Beckett's going to America to fight Brennan, and think that he never would return. In the meantime Albert Hall has come into its own again as a concert hall and is housing a series of symphony concerts. The public pulse rose in indignation when the classic auditorium was converted into a prize ring, but this has subsided and the ball has gone back to musicales as a better paying enterprise.

WHY?

Why Editor:

Why did they call the liquid with little red peppers in it that stood on the bar "Mulligan?"

F. A. Murphy.

A famous bar owner invented "Mulligan." Naturally, the inventor's name was Mulligan.

Why Editor:

Where did the name "Simon Pure" originate?

H. L. M.

Says Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase and Fable: "The real man, in Mrs. Centlivre's 'Bold Stroke for a Wife.'" A Colonel Feignwell passes himself off for Simon Pure, and wins the heart of Lovely. No sooner does he get the assent of her guardian than the veritable Quaker shows himself, and proves, beyond a doubt, he is the real Simon Pure.

Why Editor:

Why don't men wear wedding rings?

A Reader.

Nearly all the Latin race do wear wedding rings.

Why Editor:

Why do sport writers refer to a "boxing ring" as the "squared circle?"

Michael James.

In the early days of fighting a ring was marked off on the turf and the men were not allowed to step over the lines. Later when the space was roped off it formed a square, but the name "ring" continued.
